Jacob Wirth's Restaurant has considerable historic significance to the City of Boston as a still-thriving establishment serving authentic German food whose exterior facade and interior fittings, as well as its cuisine, style of service, and overall atmosphere have changed little since the late 19th century. The buildings which house it are also rare survivors of a century of urban change, soon to be the only remaining examples of their type — the bow-fronted Greek Revival rowhouse — in an area in which they once abounded (see following section, 3.2).

The restaurant's founder, Jacob Wirth, was born to a family of wine-growers in Rhenish Prussia (now northern West Germany) and emigrated to Boston shortly after the Civil War. According to Boston City directories, he first set himself up as a baker, occupying a shop just down the street from the present-day restaurant. He apparently did not begin importing German lager beers and wines until 1873 (which conflicts with the restaurant's claim of an 1868 date of origin), at which time both shop and residence were at number 60 Eliot Street — also within a block of the present restaurant. In 1878, Wirth bought and moved into the house at 37-39 Eliot (now Stuart), using the ground floor as his bar and restaurant. In 1889 he began leasing the adjoining house at 31-33 Eliot, constructing the shopfront which now unites the two buildings shortly thereafter.

The houses themselves had been built in 1844-1845 by the developer-housewright Greenleaf C. Sanborn (who was active, mostly in the newly filled South Cove and Bay Village area, between 1834 and his death in 1853), along with Thatcher Ross (another housewright), and Thomas C. Wait (a mason and housewright also active in the South Cove/Bay Village area between 1835 and 1875). The house at number 37-39 was subsequently sold to an Andover 'Gentleman' named James Bayley, who rented it out until it was sold by his heirs to Jacob Wirth in 1878. Number 31-33 was also sold to a 'Gentleman', later to be rented and eventually bought by Wirth.

Most of the restaurant's present-day fittings — the ornate mahogany bar, oak tables, brass rails, wainscoting, etc., — date from the last decade of the 19th century, when the restaurant first expanded to its present size. A quick comparison between a current menu and one from the turn of the century similarly shows little to have changed in the past 75 years (except the prices) in the way of food offerings. (An April 30, 1893, Sunday Herald article describes this cooking as "violently German" and adds that "you might easily imagine yourself in some decent hostelry on the right bank of the Rhine".) Yet another example of this changelessness is the late Fritz Fruh, a young German immigrant whom Jacob Wirth hired on in 1875 and who soon rose to headwaiter, serving in that capacity until his death in 1942, a seemingly incredible 67-year tenure.

The proprietorship of the restaurant passed to Jacob Wirth, Jr., upon his father's death in 1902, and was carried on by him until his own death, at the age of 85, in 1965. Under the latter's stewardship, the restaurant weathered two waves of anti-German sentiment (during the World Wars), Prohibition, and the Depression.

The remarkable longevity of the Wirth family's association with the restaurant has certainly had much to do with its durability and resistance to change over the course of the past century, during which time it has become a kind of popular landmark, a seemingly permanent feature on the landscape of downtown Boston.

3.2 Architectural Significance:

The Jacob Wirth Buildings are architecturally significant as the best remaining examples of the bowfronted rowhousing which proliferated in the Park Square area between 1835 and 1850. They also represent a relatively scarce residential type in the central city as a whole — the vernacular Greek Revival style bowfront — which serves as an important stylistic link between the earliest Beacon Hill bowfronts of the Federal period and the Italianate style bowfronts which predominated in the New South End in the 1850s and 1860s.

The residential development of the Park Square area was tied to two separate historical events. The location of the terminus of the Boston and Providence Railroad on the western edge of town (on the site of the Statler-Hilton Hotel) after 1833 brought increased traffic into the area; and the filling of the South Cove and Bay Village in the 1840s created new residential land to build on. The area in and around Park Square subsequently developed as a respectable (if not highly fashionable) location for the houses of Boston's expanding middle class. The area's major streets — particularly those facing the Common, the newly created Public Garden, and Park Square itself — soon became filled with rows of three- and four-story brick bowfronted residences with simple Greek Revival detailing.

The two bowfronts which now house Jacob Wirth's are the best extant examples of this once prevalent type in the Park Square area. A row of three such houses on Boylston Street opposite the Public Garden, formerly occupied by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union, and now in the process of demolition. The only other remaining examples are a pair on Stuart Street between Tremont and Carver, which have been badly altered on the first two floors and are deteriorating on the upper floors, are slated for demolition. The State Transportation Building at Park Square.

This Greek Revival bowfront house form was an important stage in the evolution of the urban rowhouse in Boston. The gently curved ('bowed') window bay was first used on the garden facades of many of the free-standing Federal Mansions built on Beacon Hill between 1800 and 1812.

The motif then became applied to the rowhouse's direct predecessor, the Federal double house — which usually appeared on the ends of the facade, framing the central entrance bays. The earliest example of this thought to be the work of Asher Benjamin, at 54-55 Beacon Street.

fronts of the houses which began to fill the vacant lots and side yards of Beacon Hill in the 1820s, the bowfront did not actually flourish until the 1830s, when it became the dominant facade treatment for the rowhouses on Louisburg and Pemberton Squares. These Greek Revival rowfronts were distinguished from their Federal antecedents by their use of pitched roofs with triangular-dormered dormers above each facade bay; flush, rectangular stone window lintels; and bolder, simpler, more monumental detailing. This style of bowfront house soon spread from Beacon Hill to the Park Square area and early parts of the New South End.

By the time of full-scale filling operations and the laying out of the new South End's residential squares in the 1850s, the bowfront had become the established urban rowhouse form in Boston. Between 1850 and the early 1870s, they were built almost exclusively in the area, laden with newly fashionable Italianate detailing such as hooded entrances, heavy modillion cornices, and mansard roofs. The increasing popularity of High Victorian styles in Boston beginning in the early 1870s brought about the decline of the bowfront, which was almost non-existent in the highly fashionable Back Bay, having been replaced by square, rectangular, cant window bays.

3 Relationship to the Criteria for Landmarks Designation:

The Jacob Wirth Buildings clearly meet the criteria for Landmark designation as established by Section 4 of Chapter 772 of the Acts of 1975 in that they are structures which are identified prominently with an important aspect of the cultural and social life of the City, and as distinctive examples of an evolving building type which is inherently valuable for study.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY

Founded by an act of the Great and General Court of the Commonwealth on April 3, 1848, the Boston Public Library was the first free and publicly supported library in the world.

It has led the field in many ways — it was the first library to allow citizens to borrow materials, the first to institute a system of neighborhood branches linked to a central library, and a pioneer in the development of special services to children.

In their historic first report in 1852, the Trustees described their aim to make the Boston Public Library "... important to the whole people, as part of their education, and an element of their happiness and prosperity."

Today's Trustees are as committed to that mission as their forefathers were more than 150 years ago. The concept is embodied and nurtured through attention to the humanities, arts, and sciences in courses of instruction, seminars, lectures, concerts, films, discussions, conferences, exhibits, and publications. It is also fostered through literacy programs and a commitment to children, young adults, and the growing senior population.

The magnitude and diversity of the BPL's programming is staggering. Last year alone, through its Central Library in Copley Square, the Kirstein Business Branch, and its 25 neighborhood branches, the BPL offered more than 5,000 free public programs, events, and school presentations.

As the largest publicly accessible library in New England, and the library of last recourse in Massachusetts, the BPL provides all citizens of the Commonwealth with research and reference sources in addition to numerous other services.

The General Library, located in Copley Square, houses the main circulating collection of more than 700,000 volumes and provides services for adults, young adults, and children, as well as specialized services for the blind and visually impaired, the deaf and hearing impaired, and the physically handicapped.

The BPL's Research Library, which is also located in Copley Square, and the Kirstein Business Branch at 20 City Hall Avenue, contains a treasure-house of information ranging from a Babylonian ration list (605-562 B.C.) to the latest high-tech publications.

A casual tour through the Research Library can be misleading because only reference books are displayed on the open shelves. The vast research holdings of books, manuscripts, newspapers, and documents are non-circulating and are housed in the closed stacks.

In order to obtain a clearer picture of the scope of the reference services available, one would need to visit all of the departments: Fine Arts, Government Documents, Humanities, Kirstein Business Branch, Maps, Microtext, Music, Newspaper Room, Print, Rare Books and Manuscripts, Science, Social Sciences, Sound Archives, and Catalog Information/Interlibrary loan.

By its most recent tabulations,

Boston Public Library . . .

more than 2 million people use the BPL each year, including many Massachusetts residents from outside the city. Of the nearly 360,000 documented users of the Research Library's closed stacks last year, for example, 184,332 were from outside Boston. An additional 143,100 telephone inquiries were made to the reference desks during the same year, many of which came from outside the City.

In addition, the Boston Public Library serves as the headquarters for the Eastern Massachusetts Regional Library System, a network of more than 200 public libraries in the state, and the Boston Library Consortium, a cooperative of 12 metropolitan-area research libraries.

It also serves as the archival center of Massachusetts newspapers, the official regional depository for U.S. Government documents, and the depository for all documents produced by the United Nations and its related agencies.

The Central Library also serves as a United States Patent Depository with more than 11 million entries, as well as patents from several foreign countries including Germany and Japan. This collection is instrumental for the research and development activities among the state's industrial community.

"The Boston Public Library is rich in history and tradition," according to Arthur Curley, director and librarian of the Boston Public Library since 1985. "Every Boston resident has good reason to be proud of this world-class institution and should, whenever possible, take advantage of its many free programs and resources."

DISAPPROVING ORDINANCE RELATIVE TO DAMAGES IN THE CASE OF CERTAIN UNDERTAKINGS AND PUBLIC TAKINGS

The following was received:
City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 4, 1989.

To the City Council.
Dear Councillors:

I return herewith without my signature and disapproved an ordinance "Relative to Damages in the Case of Certain Undertakings and Public Takings" passed by your Honorable Body on July 19, 1989, Docket Number 0119. The ordinance would require certain City of Boston boards and officers to take various steps to secure remuneration for possible damages to any owner or tenant of an estate abutting, adjacent to or near certain undertakings or takings involving public property.

Although I agree with and support the spirit behind the ordinance, the reason for my disapproval is that the ordinance would impose serious legal and administrative burdens on City boards and officers requiring that they review every proposed taking or undertaking involving public property, without regard to the magnitude of the proposal in question. Furthermore, the ordinance requires the Corporation Counsel to bring an action, whenever necessary, to secure or recover damages on behalf of private parties. Such representation by the Corporation Counsel would be beyond the scope of municipal authority. Also, the ordinance contains several technical flaws which would greatly impede the effectiveness of its operation if it were enacted.

For these reasons, I am compelled to disapprove this ordinance.

Sincerely,
Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

(Annexed hereto is the documentation referred to.)
Assigned for further action.

ORDER TO PLACE NONBINDING PUBLIC POLICY QUESTION ON REORGANIZATION OF BOSTON SCHOOL COMMITTEE ON CITY ELECTION BALLOT

The following was received:
City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 8, 1989.

To the City Council.
Dear Councillors:

We all agree that the education of our children is of primary importance to the future of our city. For this reason, I transmit herewith for your approval an advisory referendum question to be placed on the November 7th ballot. The advisory question solicits the input of the city's voters in changing the current thirteen member school committee structure to a new seven member school board, appointed by the mayor from a list of Boston residents selected by a nominating panel comprised of parents, educators, community leaders, business and labor leaders.

After months of commission hearings, public hearings and public debate, it is time to act. Clearly, no one is satisfied with the status quo. The current 13-member structure is unwieldy and unfocused and has failed to make key decisions in a timely and orderly manner. The school committee members individually have the best of intentions for our children. However, the governing structure itself has proven to be a significant barrier to change. There is consensus on the need for a smaller school board, more diverse in race, background and professional expertise, more accountable to the public for getting results.

We need both a new school board and a new vision for public education in Boston. Fundamental change will not happen without a clean break with the past. In developing this proposal, I considered a path of less political resistance, a new school board with both appointed and elected members. In the end, I decided that this approach was too tentative and educationally compromising. Our school system needs leadership and accountability now to regain the confidence of parents and taxpayers. We will make our best case for what we believe is the best proposal for the school children of our city.

The change we seek is in the classroom. We must inspire our children by giving them the self-esteem and academic skills they need to succeed. We must involve parents by giving them an informed and participatory role in the education of their children. We must motivate teachers by respecting their creativity and professional skills. We must move key decisions closer and closer to the classroom so that we respond to the diverse needs of the children we serve. We must make sure that quality education for our children is the single focus for decision making in our schools. We must never lower our expectations because of the socio-economic conditions facing many of our school children. Our public schools can and must rise to the challenge of equal opportunity for all. Anything less is unacceptable.

This change in governance is merely the route we must take to achieve fundamental school reform. The status quo protects the entrenched. It does not allow for the fundamental change necessary to make the classroom and the individual school the central focus for education in Boston.

I have come to this position in consultation with a broad range of parents, educators and community leaders. Last fall, I appointed a Mayor's Advisory Committee on School Reform, chaired by Dean Hubie Jones. The Advisory Committee made three recommendations: school choice for parents, school-based management, and an appointed school board. In the words of the Advisory Committee's final report, "All three priorities must be addressed for any one of these to have the fundamental impact we seek. At each level of the system, from top to bottom, there must be a commitment to change which results in clear lines of authority, responsibility and accountability."

Subsequently, the City Council established a Special Commission on Public Schools, chaired by Professor James Jennings. The Special Commission detailed a history of failed decision-making in the areas of vocational education, special education, student assignment, school closings and consolidations, the drop out rate, and the budget. To quote this second report, "The Commission believes that it is now more important than ever to end the legacy of inaction and get decisive action on pressing policy issues. Decisions will get harder, not easier; resources will get tighter, not looser." The Special Commission report calls for a fundamental change in the role of the school board. The school board should set basic policy and educational goals for the system. Subsequent budget and policy decisions should be made in the context of this educational vision, not in the fragmented and crisis-oriented manner that now prevails.

Some have argued that the move to an appointed board undermines democratic participation in the governing of our schools. I contend just the opposite. Democracy is not something we exercise just one day every two years. Democracy is an ongoing process which respects the input of parents and the community on a daily basis. The recent school closing controversy demonstrates just how undemocratic the current structure has become.

Through the Nominating Panel process, parents and community leaders will play a public role in recruiting a diverse school board which will function as a team, making sure that educational concerns always prevail. We will mandate that the new school board develop its central policies in a timely manner so that specific decisions can be delegated to zone councils and school site councils. We will build a broad based coalition dedicated to quality education for our children.

I urge swift passage of this order placing this pressing public policy question before the voters this November.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Whereas, Two unions, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (I.B.E.W.) and the Communication Workers of America (C.W.A.) represent more than 60,000 non-management employees of the NYNEX Telephone Corporation; and

Whereas, One of the key negotiating points in the strike is who will bear the burden of rising health-care costs; and

Whereas, The NYNEX health insurance proposal will increasingly shift the burden to employees thus impacting most adversely low pay scale workers — mailroom attendants, clerical workers and operators — who are largely single, head of household, women and minorities; and

Whereas, Non-management employees have already incurred rising health care costs by forgoing full pay raises in exchange for free health insurance; and

Whereas, The Boston Redevelopment Authority has commissioned economist Charles Finn to conduct a study of lending practices in the City of Boston; and

Whereas, An August 6, 1989 Boston Globe article indicated the BRA study will not examine insurance companies and pension funds as was initially planned; and

Whereas, Insurance companies and pension funds are considered two of the largest untapped sources for affordable housing and small business development because they can act as a secondary market for home mortgage securities; and

Whereas, There is no data available on how much money insurance companies and pension funds contribute to community credit needs; and

Whereas, A complete analysis of all potential funding sources is essential in aiding full economic and community development in Boston's neighborhoods; therefore be it

Ordered, That the Boston Redevelopment Authority include insurance companies and pension funds in their study of lending practices in the City of Boston and examine how these two funding sources can be fully utilized in meeting community credit needs.

Passed under suspension of the rules.

ARCHAEOLOGY OF THE BOSTON COMMON

About this Project

Archaeology of the Boston Common is being conducted by Boston's City Archaeology Program. The objective of the project is to locate and identify important archaeological sites. The results will help Boston's Parks and Recreation Department protect unique archaeological evidence of the city's past.

This work involves careful excavation of soil at more than 100 locations throughout the Common. Significant sites have been discovered already. These include camp sites used by Native Americans more than 2,000 years ago, possible colonial period military encampments and evidence of landscaping by the Olmsted firm.

Artifacts include stone tools, pottery, glass, metal and animal bones. These are analyzed by specialists and volunteers at City Archaeology Laboratory.

The archaeologist will prepare and distribute a report describing their findings at the conclusion of the project.

What is Archaeology?

You do not have to go to Italy or Greece to do archaeology. Archaeology involves the study of human behavior by the investigation of material evidence from any time period.

Prehistorians are archaeologists who study groups that did not keep their own written records but left behind artifacts (materials modified by man) and archaeological sites (locations where artifacts are found). Historical archaeologists study material evidence of record-keeping societies, including our own.

Archaeological sites must be carefully excavated and records must be kept to help identify the location of any discoveries. In which soil deposit was an artifact found? How old are the artifacts from a particular location? Has the site been disturbed by non-archaeological digging? Does the archaeological record contradict or support what we already know about the site's occupants? These are some of the questions that archaeologists ask when they excavate sites.

Back at the laboratory, specialists and volunteers alike analyze the artifacts and fieldnotes. They attempt to answer more specific questions such as: what kinds of animals did Native Americans eat? Did colonial Bostonians import most of their household goods from England? What types of plants did Boston gardeners plant?

Finally, the archaeologists photograph and illustrate the artifacts and prepare a final site report. Ideally, the artifacts are put on public display and field and laboratory records carefully stored for future reference.

Boston's City Archaeology Program

Boston's City Archaeology Program promotes quality archaeological work in Boston, locates and protects important Boston archaeological sites and educates and involves the public in Boston archaeology.

'Archaeology of the Boston Common' is funded by the Environment Department and the Parks and Recreation Department of the City of Boston. Special thanks is extended to the many public volunteers who have assisted with the field and lab work.

The Boston Common was a stage for many key events in American history and it is a source of pride for all Bostonians. Today, we are acting to protect its natural and historic qualities to ensure a bright future for this unique city park.

Geology & Prehistory

Glacial Ice left the Boston area about 12,000 years ago. To the north of the Common was left a tall hill with three peaks, of which Beacon Hill is a remnant. To the west was the Charles River estuary, known in later times as Boston's Back Bay.

Native Americans occupied the Boston area, and possibly the Boston Common, as early as 6,000 years ago. Archaeologists have found evidence of their camp sites, stone tools, pottery, and food.

The 17th Century

In 1634 the Town of Boston purchased the Boston Common from William Blackstone, the first European resident of the Shawmut peninsula. In that same year, the purchase was "laid out of place for a traying field . . . & for the feeding of Cattell." In 1675 John Josslyn noted, "there is a small but pleasant Common where the Gallants a little before Sunset walk with their Marmaleet-Madams, as we do in Moorfields, etc. till a nine o'clock Bell rings them home to their respective habitations."

The 18th Century

The Boston Common was further developed for military and recreational use during the 18th century. Between 1703 and 1711, a powder house, watch house, and shed were constructed on Flagstaff Hill. Provincial troops were mustered on the Common during King George's War. In 1756, British soldiers were buried here. British forces occupied and fortified the Common prior to and during the Siege of Boston.

Archaeologists have uncovered possible military encampment areas that have yielded gunflints, musket balls, wine bottles, and pottery dating to the 18th century.

By 1734, elm trees were planted along Tremont Street Mall. By the 18th century, tree-lined malls extended nearly around the Boston Common. Unfortunately, subway construction and disease have claimed many of the great elms.

The 19th Century

During the 19th century the Boston Common was transformed into a public park. Cows were removed from the Common by 1830 and tree-lined walkways were extended throughout. The Boston Common became a setting for public monuments and for large public meetings and events. A log cabin was constructed for the Whig campaign of 1840. Booths for the sale of gingerbread, candy, and lemonade could be found on the Common as well. Between 1861 and 1865 recruitment tents were set up for the Union Army.

Archaeologists have found evidence for the increasing recreational use of the Boston Common during the 19th century. Landscaping was undertaken to reduce the height of hills and to fill in depressions. Large quantities of ceramics, glass and metal artifacts have been found from this period, including many toys of children.

POLONSKY ART EXHIBIT MARCH 12—APRIL 30 AT BPL

The teaching drawings of Arthur Polonsky, distinguished Boston artist and teacher, will on display in the Wiggin Gallery of the Boston Public Library in Copley Square beginning March 12th and continuing through April 30th.

The exhibition presents 115 drawings selected by Polonsky, who will retire from the Boston University faculty in May. These small drawings are made in class by the artist to show students particular techniques or approaches. Accompanying caption material will explain the significance and teaching points associated with each print. In making this selection, Polonsky worked closely with Judith Friedbert, who last year served as an intern in the BPL Print Department while completing her graduate work at Simmons. Ms. Friedbert is the guest curator for the exhibit.

Polonsky's works, 1944-1990, will also be on exhibit from March 11th to 27th at the Fitchburg Art Museum.

He graduated from the Hebrew Teachers College in Boston in 1944 and with highest honors from the Boston Museum School in 1948 where he began teaching career in 1950. In 1954 he was named assistant professor in the Fine Arts Department at Brandeis where he remained until 1965 when he joined

"COOKS IN PRINT" LECTURE SERIES AT THE BPL

The "grande dame of American cooking" will be joined by other noted chefs, cookbook authors, editors, and restaurateurs for a celebration of the art of cooking in a six-week lecture series at the Boston Public Library entitled "Cooks in Print."

In the opening lecture of the series on March 20th, Julia Child will discuss her newest bestseller, "The Way to Cook." Called "America's most celebrated cook," she studied at the Gordon Bleu School in Paris and taught cooking with Simone Beck and Louisette Bertholle, with whom she wrote the first volume of "Mastering the Art of French Cooking," published in 1961. She is more widely recognized for her work in the television series, "The French Chef," launched by Boston's WGBH-TV in 1963, for which she has earned the Peabody Award and an Emmy. The lecture is being cosponsored by the Boston Public Library and the Harvard Bookstore Cafe in collaboration with WGBH.

Other lectures in the series include noted cookbook editor Judith Jones, Boston restaurateurs George Berkowitz and Jasper White, and author Rose Levy Beranbaum. The lectures will take place in the BPL's Rabb Lecture Hall in Copley Square at 6 p.m. All programs are free and open to the public. Seating is limited. The schedule is as follows:

March 27th: Jasper White, chef and owner of Boston's acclaimed Jasper's restaurant, will speak about his first cookbook, "Jasper White's Cooking From New England." Cosponsored by the Harvard Bookstore Cafe.

April 5th: A panel of cookbook authors who owns popular restaurants in Massachusetts will discuss their experiences writing cookbooks and running restaurants. Participants include: Odette Bery, owner and chef of Another Season Restaurant and author of "Another Season Cookbook"; George Berkowitz, owner of Legal Sea Foods and author of "The Legal Sea Foods Cookbook"; and Sarah Leah Chase, owner of Que Sera Sarah and author of the "Nantucket Open-House Cookbook."

April 19th: A behind-the-scenes look at how a cookbook is made with Judith Jones, the editor for Julia Child and many other cookbook authors and the originator of a new regional cookbook series, "Knopf Cooks American."

April 26th: The showing of the award-winning film, "Babette's Feast," which culminates in a lavish banquet prepared by a housemaid who turns out to be a world-class chef. Winner of the 1987 Academy Award for Best Foreign Film.

May 2nd: To end this culinary feast, a rich and elegant dessert: Rose Levy Beranbaum, author of "The Cake Bible," will talk about her apprenticeship in the kitchens of Maurice and Jean Jacques Bernachon, the famed French chocolatiers, the result of which is her latest book, "A Passion for Chocolate."

Autographing sessions will follow each lecture.

A related exhibit of American cookbooks will be on display in the Research Library during the month of August.

VIII. HIGH COMMENDATION

At 2126 hours, February 2, 1990, a serious accident occurred at the intersection of A and West 10th Street, District 6, when a taxicab struck a number truck broadside, shearing off the hood of the cab down to the engine block and pushing the truck approximately twenty feet. Gasoline, released from the carburetor, immediately ignited engulfing the engine compartment of the taxi.

Fire Fighter David A. Glover, Engine Company 10, who was off duty at the time, immediately went to the assistance of the victims, removing both from the burning vehicle. He then secured a fire extinguisher, extinguished the fire, and then performed first-aid on the injured victims.

Because he performed these acts prior to the arrival of fire apparatus, without the use of personal safety equipment and without consideration of his own safety, reflecting credit upon himself and the Boston Fire Department, the Fire Commissioner is pleased to highly commend Fire Fighter David A. Glover, Engine Company 10. I refer his case to the Board of Merit for further consideration.

IX. COMMENDATION

The Fire Commissioner is pleased to commend Fire Fighter John J. Forristall, Engine Company 33, for responding to and working at Box 8213, Winthrop, Incident #4020, for three alarms struck for a building at 765 Highland Avenue, and makes this commendation a part of his personnel folder.

CITY OF BOSTON

Proceedings of City Council

Wednesday, August 16, 1989.

Regular meeting of the City Council held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, at 1 p.m., President IAN-NELLA in the chair and all the members present.

OPENING OF MEETING

The Reverend Robert Tormey, St. Theresa's Parish, West Roxbury, delivered the invocation, and the meeting was opened with the salute to the flag.

DISAPPROVING ORDINANCE CREATING FOR A LIMITED TIME A SPECIAL COMMISSION ON WATER CONSERVATION

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 14, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I return herewith without my signature and disapproved an ordinance passed by your Honorable Body July 26, 1989, Docket Number 0977, which would create for a limited time a special commission on water conservation.

The reason for my disapproval is that the City Charter requires that the Mayor appoint all the members of such a commission. See St. 1909, c. 486, Sec. 9. The provision in the proposed ordinance whereby the President of the City Council appoints two City Councillors to the commission violates that section of the Charter.

In addition, the City of Boston has dramatically reduced its water consumption over the last several years, going from 150 million gallons of water a day to 121.5 million gallons a day. Further, the Boston Water and Sewer Commission, in cooperation with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority and City agencies, is already undertaking the measures set forth in the ordinance, such as the introduction of new water conservation methods and the development of uniform water conservation standards. Therefore, this ordinance is not needed to accomplish our mutual goal of reduced water use.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

(Annexed hereto is the ordinance referred to.)

Assigned for further action.

DISAPPROVING ORDER THAT COLLECTOR-TREASURER BEGIN PROCEDURES TO END ALL FINANCIAL DEALINGS WITH SHAWMUT NATIONAL CORPORATION UNTIL UNITED MINE WORKERS OF AMERICA ENDS STRIKE AGAINST PITTSTON COMPANY

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 14, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I return herewith without my signature and disapproved an order passed by your Honorable Body on July 26, 1989, Docket Number 0984, which orders the Collector-Treasurer to begin procedures to end all financial dealings with Shawmut National Corporation until the United Mine Workers of America ends its strike against the Pittston Company.

The Law Department advises me that the order conflicts with the City Charter on at least two points, and this is my reason for disapproval. The Charter prohibits the Council from directly or indirectly taking part in the making of contracts. The Charter also prohibits the Council from taking part in the conduct of the executive or administrative business of the City. (See, St. 1948, c. 452, 2. 17G as appearing in St. 1951, c. 376, s. 1).

As the City Council knows, I recently travelled to Virginia, met with the striking mine workers and their families, and witnessed firsthand the crippling effects of that dispute on the poor and working families of Appalachia. As people of good will, we cannot look the other way when this particular coal company attempts to destroy the collective bargaining process and thereby crush a way of life that has sustained families in Appalachia for generations.

Therefore, I want to assure you that, notwithstanding the necessity of my disapproval of the order on legal grounds, I intend to use my influence and authority to seek an equitable solution to this matter. Rather than abruptly withdrawing City funds from Shawmut at this time, an action that would cause unnecessary cost to the City, I have ordered Lee Jackson, Treasurer of the City of Boston, to refrain from increasing the amount of City funds held on deposit at the Shawmut Bank of Boston until Shawmut Vice-President William Craig, in his capacity as board member of the Pittston Coal Company, takes positive steps to bring about face-to-face negotiations with the United Mineworkers of America.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

(Annexed hereto is the order referred to.)

Assigned for further action.

ORDER FOR PETITION FOR SPECIAL LAW RE AN ACT RELATING TO INVESTMENT OF PUBLIC PENSION FUNDS OF BOSTON IN FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS AND CORPORATIONS RELATIVE TO NORTHERN ISLAND

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 15, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I transmit herewith for your approval a home rule petition relating to the investment of public pension funds of the City of Boston in financial institutions and corporations relative to Northern Island. The petition is in keeping with the City of Boston's commitment to fairness and to equal opportunity and is based upon adherence to the MacBride Principles.

The first part of the legislation pertains to the divestment of City of Boston public pension funds in corporations which manufacture, distribute or sell firearms or munitions for use in Northern Ireland, as well as divestment of such funds in financial institutions making loans to those corporations.

The second part of the legislation pertains to American corporations operation in Northern Ireland. City of Boston public pension funds henceforth shall be invested only in those corporations which adhere to principles of nondiscrimination in employment and freedom of workplace opportunity.

I am pleased to have in this effort the support of the Irish-American Labor Coalition of the Massachusetts AFL-CIO, along with that of Inez McCormack, Regional Director of the National Union of Public Employees (the largest public sector union in Northern Ireland) and one of four original signatories to the MacBride Principles. Both have long stood with me in our joint efforts in support of investment with fairness in Northern Ireland.

The City of Boston has a very legitimate interest in ensuring that our pension funds are used to encourage the very principle of investment with fairness and not to help sustain that society of evident inequality that Northern Ireland has been since its inception 69 years ago. The MacBride Principles represent a reasonable criterion for progress in the area of fair employment. The Principles include the following standards:

- 1) Equal success to employment, promotion, and job-preservation without regard to religious affiliation or other minority status.
- 2) The banning of provocative religious or political emblems from the workplace.
- 3) That all job openings should be publicly advertised and special recruitment efforts should be made to attract applicants from under-represented religious groups.
- 4) Layoff, recall and termination procedures should not, in practice, favor particular religious groupings.
- 5) The appointment of a senior management staff member to oversee the company's affirmative action efforts and the setting up of timetables to carry out affirmative action principles.
- 6) The development of training programs to prepare members of the minority community in Northern Ireland for skilled jobs and for skills improvement.
- 7) The abolition of job reservations, apprenticeship restrictions and different employment criteria which discriminate on the basis of religion or ethnic origin.

In a Northern Ireland society where adult Catholic males are more than two and one-half times more likely to be unemployed than their Protestant counterparts, and where adult unemployment for Catholics is more than 40 per cent in urban areas such as Strabane and Newry, the need for more American investment with fairness is compelling. The criterion for fairness represented by the MacBride Principles provides a clear framework for American companies. The need for adherence to the MacBride Principles is underscored by the failure of the British Government this year to enact fair employment legislation that provides for affirmative action and for the setting of goals and timetables for the hiring of more members of the Catholic community.

Fair employment in Northern Ireland is neither a "British domestic issue" nor an "Irish issue." It is an issue of fundamental human rights.

In the legislation submitted today, the City of Boston has the unique opportunity to lead the way on the question of investment with fairness in Northern Ireland. As a member of Boston City Council in 1981, I conducted a hearing on employment discrimination in Northern Ireland. At that time, first-hand testimony was taken from Fr. Brady of Belfast. It is a stark indictment of the British Government's record in Northern Ireland that the situation has not improved since I heard that testimony and that Northern Ireland still has not seen the need for fundamental change. The City of Boston must be part of the solution as agents for change.

I urge your Honorable Body to pass this home rule petition. Furthermore, I shall be issuing an Executive Order which will direct that no City agency shall contract with a corporation doing business in Northern Ireland unless such corporation adheres to the MacBride Principles.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Ordered, That a petition to the General Court, accompanied by a bill for a special law relating to the City of Boston to be filed with an attested copy of this order be, and hereby is, approved under clause (1) of section 8 of Article 2, as amended, of the Amendments to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to the end that legislation be adopted providing precisely as follows, except for clerical or editorial errors.

Section 1. Notwithstanding any general or special law or regulations to the contrary, and subsequent to a determination made in accordance with section two of this act, no public pension funds of the City of Boston shall remain invested in or remain deposited in any bank or financial institution which directly or through its subsidiaries has outstanding loans to any individual corporation engaged in the manufacture, distribution or sale of firearms or munitions, including but not limited to rubber or plastic bullets, tear gas, armored vehicles, or military aircraft for use or development in any activity in Northern Ireland. Further, consistent with sound financial practices and after reasonable notice and an opportunity to comply, no public pension funds of the City of Boston shall remain invested in the stocks, securities or other obligations of any corporation so engaged.

Section 2. No public pension funds of the City of Boston shall be invested in or remain invested in corporations organized under the laws of the United States or the several states and operating in Northern Ireland unless corporations so engaged adhere to principles of nondiscrimination in employment and freedom of workplace opportunity. In making such a determination, the Retirement Board of the City of Boston shall consider, without limitation, the following standards for corporate activity:

- (1) equal access to employment, promotion, and job-preservation without regard to religious affiliation or other minority status;
- (2) the promotion of religious tolerance within the workplace, and the eradication of any manifestations of religious and other illegal discrimination;
- (3) adherence to other legal and regulatory guidelines for nondiscrimination and equality of opportunity existing in Northern Ireland; and
- (4) adherence to the MacBride Principles for Northern Ireland, so-called.

Section 3. In making such a determination, said Retirement Board may conduct its own initial and subsequent investigations or may utilize and rely upon any other reliable investigation or information available relative to similar pension plans.

Section 4. This act shall take effect upon its passage.

Referred to the Committee on Government Operations.

APPROPRIATION OF $355,200,000 FOR SCHOOL DEPARTMENT

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 16, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I retransmit herewith an appropriation order, in the amount of $355,200,000, for General School Purposes for FY90, submitted pursuant to the provisions of chapter 224 of the Acts of 1936, as amended by chapter 190 of the Acts of 1982, as further amended by chapter 701 of the Acts of 1986 and chapter 613 of the Acts of 1987.

This requested appropriation for the Boston School Department represents a $12.6 million or 3.7 percent increase over the current fiscal year appropriation. When combined with discretionary revenue this appropriation will support an authorized spending level of $362 million. The Department projects another $45 million will be available in categorical grant funds, for a total operating budget of $407 million for FY90.

The appropriation will provide $2.1 million in repair and maintenance funding, in conjunction with the recommendations of the Maintenance Improvement Program. In addition, the City of Boston has committed $164.8 million in capital improvements for school facilities.

The appropriation will support the implementation of the Student Assignment Plan initiatives, thus providing parental choice and fostering educational equality.

The appropriation, while fiscally prudent, reflects my continued commitment to protect public education from the severe cuts in local aid funds. I respectfully ask your support for this appropriation of $355.2 million for the Boston School Department for FY90.

Sincerely,

Raymond L. Flynn.
Mayor of Boston.

Ordered, That pursuant to chapter 224 of the Acts of 1936, as amended by chapter 190 of the Acts of 1982, and as further amended by chapter 701 of the Acts of 1986 and chapter 613 of the Acts of 1987, to meet the current operating expenses of the School Department in the fiscal period commencing July 1, 1989, and ending June 30, 1990, the sum of $355,200,000 be, and the same hereby is, appropriated, said sum to be raised by taxation pursuant to section 23 of chapter 59 of the General Laws:

School Department, $355,200,000.

Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

EMERGENCY PREAMBLE

Coun. KELLY offered the following:

Under Rule 36 of the City Council, it is hereby requested that the rules be suspended, and the attached order of an emergency nature be admitted.

The order is late filed because the information around which the order is based only came to my attention yesterday. In order to ensure that public housing residents are not unduly alarmed by notices to quit sent to their apartments, the Committee on Housing should be apprised of the matter and hold a public hearing on the notices at the earliest time convenient.

The Emergency Preamble was adopted.

Rule 11 was suspended.

COMMITTEE ON HOUSING TO HOLD HEARING TO DISCUSS BHA'S PLAN TO EVICT LONG-TIME TENANTS

Coun. KELLY offered the following:

Whereas, This past week, Boston Housing Authority tenants were notified that the BRA was in the process of implementing a new policy regarding over-income tenants; and

Whereas, This new policy includes evicting families whose incomes exceed the income limits for continued occupancy; and

Whereas, Quite often the over-income status of these tenants is only temporary, having been brought about by sons and/or daughters entering the job market upon completing their education; and

Whereas, The vast majority of these sons and daughters eventually leave their family's apartment, thereby eliminating the over-income status; be it therefore

Ordered, That the Committee on Housing conduct a public hearing to discuss the BHA's plans to evict long-time tenants, and also to determine how many families in each development have received said eviction notices, be it further Ordered, That the mayor of the city of Boston, as the court appointed receiver, or his designee, and BHA administrator Doris Bunte, be invited to attend.

CHILDREN OF WAR TOUR BOSTON

Local and International Youth to Join in Anti-Violence Project

Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn hosted an official city welcome for the "Children of War Tour" as a delegation of the international youth program began a three-week visit to Boston on Monday, March 19. The 2 p.m. welcome and press conference took place in the Eagle Room, Mayor's Office, Boston City Hall. The twelve-member group addressed audiences in area high schools, churches and community settings between March 17 and April 1. A project of the Religious Task Force, the group employs the leadership of peer role models from violent, war-torn areas around the world to promote alternatives to violence, racism, and despair among their peers. Included in the tour group are representatives of local urban youth and members of local refugee communities.

The tour will kick off a two-year project aimed at reaching thousands of young people in the greater Boston area. Simultaneous tours will be visiting New York and Los Angeles. The 1990 tour is the third organized by the six-year-old organization. In Boston, the tours visited 17 schools, community centers, churches, and resulted in the development of a multicultural youth chapter in 1987. Included in the Boston tour group will be teenagers from Lebanon, South Africa, Palestine, Northern Ireland, Haiti, Mozambique, Cambodia, Israel and Central America, and an Onondaga Native American.

Among other honors, Children of War received the Reebok International Human Rights Award in 1988. Directed by a 13-person Boston Advisory Board, Children of War-Boston has participated in programs with the Boston Public Schools, Boston Police Department and Boston community schools program, and community groups.

For information on the tour, or to schedule interviews with the participants, the press is asked to contact Ann Demeter at 522-3553 or Vanita Matta at 338-1053.

Background

Children of War is a six-year-old national organization that developed and implemented a series of U.S. tours featuring youth leadership training programs that are highly effective in decreasing violence, racism and despair among urban youth. These tours creatively employ the leadership of peer role models from areas of war and violence both abroad and in the United States as a catalyst for developing effective local youth chapters.

Previous Children of War tours have reached over 100,000 young people in 400 high schools in 60 U.S. cities. The Children of War network includes agencies in 13 war-torn countries, 8 refugee communities based in the U.S. and 14 cities.

In Boston, the tours visited 17 schools, community centers and churches in 1984 and 1986. A strong multi-cultural youth chapter has conducted workshops and presented speakers and concerts to a wide array of youth audiences to help heal racial divisions, decrease violence and develop youth leadership.

During 1988, Children of War received the Reebok International Human Rights Award, the Governor's

Award for "Multicultural Education and Promoting International Friendship," the Bread and Roses Award of the National Women's Political Caucus and the Anita Mischler Award for "Multi-racial Work with Youth."

The 1990 tour in Boston will kick off a two-year pilot project in the area. The initial tour will be followed by a series of leadership training workshops and the formation of youth chapters that will work to develop and then implement a comprehensive anti-violence campaign in Boston. Additionally, the tour will be supplemented by a curriculum resource packet, teacher training workshops and programs for parents.

The tour is being planned by a 13-person Boston Advisory Board and a 20-person Steering Committee of Children of War-Boston. The program and campaign are being integrated with other initiatives within the Boston Public Schools, the Boston Police Department, the Community Schools Program, the William Joiner Center at the University of Massachusetts-Boston, and with the work of participating community organizations.

LOCATION: Boston Common
Tremont Street

ARTIST: Paul Lienard (1849-1900)

DATE OF FABRICATION: 1867

MATERIAL: Bronze with granite basin and foundation

BACKGROUND: The fountain was imported from Switzerland by Gardner Brewer who had seen it at the Paris Exposition of 1867. For many years, it stood in front of the Brewer home at 29 Beacon Street. The heroic size statues represent Amphitrite, Acis, Galatea and Neptune.

Several hanging rosettes are missing, exposing the iron bolts used for attachment. The piping system is not functioning properly.

REQUIRED: MAINTENANCE. Parks Department began work in March 1990 on the renovation of fountain piping and repair and restoration of the bronze.

CHESTNUT HILL RESERVOIR AND PUMP STATIONS

Boston Landmarks Commission; Environment Department; City of Boston

3.0 SIGNIFICANCE OF THE PROPERTY

3.1 Summary — The Chestnut Hill reservoir and pumping stations are extremely significant as an unusually intact example of a 19th century complex. It combines several of Boston's best examples of public architecture, engineering and technology. The complex reflects planning policies which gained importance in the second half of the 19th century and mirrors a growing civic pride, manifested in public improvements.

The complex was created out of a concern for public health and safety. The city used the opportunity to construct a number of high style civic buildings and to create a pastoral park and drive intended for use by the public. In addition many noteworthy architects and planners were associated with the works.

and its extension in the mid-20th century. The constant development and expansion of facilities at Chestnut Hill have left a technological legacy of gravity and pressure conduits, manual and hydraulic gates, and a veritable museum of 19th and early 20th century pumping engines, plus modern gas powered replacements.

Arranged around Bradlee Basin, the buildings and structures at Chestnut Hill present a compendium of the water system's architectural themes. The Greek Revival, first employed on the Cochituate, is represented in the intermediate and effluent gatehouses built in 1868-70. The picturesque eclecticism associated with the "additional supply" developed in the 1870s is portrayed to great effect in George Clough's Sudbury Terminal Chamber. The addition by Wheelwright and Haven, is an outstanding example of the Richardsonian Romanesque style, and rightly, an area landmark. The turn-of-the-century revival of neoclassical styles is vividly illustrated in Shepley, Rutan and Coolidge's low service pumping station, a highly successful adaptation of the Beaux Arts style to utilitarian function, and, on a smaller scale, in contemporary low and high service gatehouse.

In a comprehensive report on the entire metropolitan water system, prepared for the Metropolitan District Commission by the Cultural Resources Group of Louis Berger & Associates, Inc. titled The Water Supply System of Metropolitan Boston 145-1926, the following is written of the significance of Chestnut Hill:

Chestnut Hill is among the most significant, and certainly the most highly visible, complex within the Metropolitan Water Supply System. It marks the connection between supply (Cochituate and Sudbury aqueducts) and distribution (high and low service pumping stations) that operated until completion of the City Tunnel

Although the Chestnut Hill facility is largely obsolete, the buildings and landscaped grounds remain well-maintained symbols of the Boston and Metropolitan water supply systems. Combining functional, technological and architectural importance, Chestnut Hill must be considered a pivotal element in the system as a whole, with the priority given to its future care and conservation.

Historical Overview of the Metropolitan Water System — Boston's first inhabitants received their water from cisterns and underground wells. The quality was often poor and the availability was sporadic. In 1796, the Aqueduct Corporation, a private company, began delivering water from Jamaica Pond by a system of wooden pipes.

By the mid-19th century, the water supply was inadequate. It was thought that the prevention of disease, particularly cholera, was linked with pure water and air. In addition, water was required for fire fighting purposes. In 1846 the Commonwealth granted the City the authority to develop a water supply; John Jervis was hired to design and oversee the construction of a reservoir and aqueduct. Jervis utilized Long Pond in Natick, later renamed Lake Cochituate.

Construction was begun in August, 1846, and the water lines were connected on October 25, 1848. The opening was celebrated at a ceremony at the Frog Pond in the Boston Common; water was sent through a fountain, 80 feet into the air. The water flowed through the Cochituate Aqueduct to the Brookline Reservoir (still extant on Route 9-Boylston Street in Brookline). The aqueduct is an egg-shaped, brick conduit, 76 inches high, 60 inches wide, and fourteen miles long. This system supplied the city with 18 million gallons per day.

By the late 1870s, Boston needed additional water to serve its rapidly growing population. In 1875-78, the city expanded its water supply by utilizing the Sudbury River Watershed. This system provided water from four reservoirs in Framingham. Water flowed through the Sudbury Aqueduct into the recently completed Chestnut Hill Reservoir, increasing the city's supply to 69 million gallons per day.

In 1895, the state Legislature established the Metropolitan Water Board (forerunner of the MDC and MWRA) to supply water to seven cities and six towns in the Boston metropolitan area. Regional jurisdiction was needed to coordinate efforts and keep rates low.

The Metropolitan Water Board took control of major portions of Boston's water supply system including Chestnut Hill. To expand the water supply, Sudbury Reservoir in Southborough was developed first. Then, a reservoir on the Nashua River in Clinton was constructed, now known as the Wachusett Reservoir. It began supplying water to the Sudbury system in 1908. A network of 400 miles of tunnels, aqueducts and large pipes and over 6,000 miles of smaller pipes was laid out; this system was in place and functioning by the 1930s. These facilities served metropolitan Boston until construction of the Quabbin began in the 1930s.

The Massachusetts Water Board's original plan, developed by Frederic Stearns, the Public Health Board's chief engineer, called for a much larger reservoir to be added in the future. It was known that increasing development near the Wachusett Reservoir was detrimental to water quality. In 1939, the Quabbin Reservoir was completed. It held 412 billion gallons of water, and was filled to capacity by 1946. The reservoir now provides water to 2 million people, an average of 300 million gallons a day.

Chestnut Hill Reservoir — The Chestnut Hill Reservoir played a major role in the supply of water to the Metropolitan area. It functioned as a supply and distribution reservoir for over 100 years.

The need for a new reservoir, to supplement the capacity of the Brookline reservoir, had been repeatedly brought before the Cochituate Water Board in 1865. The Chestnut Hill site was chosen because the topography and location provided access between the water source and distribution, with the proper intermediary elevation for gravity flow. The City Engineer, N. Henry Crafts, recommended the site; the Commonwealth's authorization was granted in 1865. The Board decided to purchase additional acreage for a second basin, the Lawrence Meadow property then owned by Amos A. Lawrence.

Nineteen separate land transactions were needed in order to purchase the entire site; this was accomplished by 1867 and cost the City $120,000. While Beacon Street had to be moved to a more southerly alignment, it appears that no other developments were affected. According to John G. Hale's 1830 survey, there were no other structures in the area. The topography was marsh and meadow land with woodlands and hills.

Construction of the reservoir basins at Chestnut Hill occurred between 1866-70. Albert Stanwood was Superintendent of Chestnut Hill reservoir in March 1866. Henry M. Wightman, the Resident Engineer at Chestnut Hill, and his staff of five were responsible for detailed surveys and plans. Plans and specifications for the gate house were made by the office of the City Engineer, N. Henry Crafts.

Housing was built on site for the over 400 workers, many were recent Irish immigrants and veterans returning from the Civil War. Stables were constructed for teams of horses and oxen; at least fifty animals were utilized. Construction work included building the embankment, dam, gate houses and support sheds, laying brick drainage sewers and blasting ledge rock. Wages were $1.50 per day; a strike in 1867 brought them up to $1.75. According to the History of the Boston Water Works from 1868 to 1876, the total cost of land acquisition and construction, in the first decade, was almost 2.5 million dollars. However, revenues from city water sales for the same period were over $565,000.

Lawrence Basin was finished first; water was let in on October 27, 1868, the twentieth anniversary of the introduction of pure water into Boston. The basin was named for Amos Lawrence, the first president of the Cochituate Water Board and former owner of Lawrence Meadow. A celebration was held, featuring speeches from Mayor Shurtleff and Nathaniel J. Bradlee, president of the Water Board. Bradlee stated that the completed basins could provide a month's supply of water in case of a break in the aqueduct. Also on that day the Highland Standpipe in Roxbury began operation. The standpipe was intended to provide high pressure service throughout the city.

Bradlee Basin was completed and operational two years later, on October 25, 1870. This basin was named after Nathaniel J. Bradlee, noted architect and president of the Water Board. An impermeable earth and stone dam separated the two basins. The chamber of a small granite gatehouse, built on the dam, allowed either basin to be emptied for cleaning or repairs. The Cochituate Aqueduct runs underneath the reservoir.

The Chestnut Hill reservoir was originally built with two 48-inch mains, one to Brookline reservoir and one directly to the city. It served for many years as the principal receiving and distributing reservoir for Boston, supplying water by gravity. When the Sudbury aqueduct opened in 1878, it was connected to the Chestnut Hill reservoir as an additional source through the Terminal Chamber. In the last third of the 19th century, Boston's sanitary projects were to take one-third of the total City budget.

When elevated territory was annexed to Boston in the mid 1870s, additional high service was needed. At this time, the Boston water system serviced the fifth largest population in the nation following New York City, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, and Chicago.² During this period of growth, Chestnut Hill supplied most of Boston's water; it was chosen as the site of the new high service facility. The high service station was constructed, in conjunction with the Reservoir on Fisher Hill in Brookline, for this purpose in 1887. The pumps at Chestnut Hill were used to fill Fisher Hill reservoir one mile away, at the higher elevation of 241 feet. From there the water went to Parker Hill Reservoir (now McLaughlin field on Mission Hill) at 219 feet elevation or directly to distribution. In 1890, over half of the city required high pressure service in order to be supplied with water from Chestnut Hill, according to The Manual of American Water-Works 1889-90.

In 1897 construction began for an engine room addition to High Service. In 1898 construction of the Low Service pumping station began. The second pumping station at Chestnut Hill was needed to fill a "near" storage and distributing reservoir at Spot Pond (Stoneham) and to increase low service pressure for a growing downtown. By the end of 1898 the Metropolitan Water Board had increased its total storage capacity to 15,755,600,000 gallons and its daily capacity to over 105,000,000 gallons per day.

The most important technological aspect of the facilities' operations was the design and installation of the Leavitt engine in the original High Service engine room. Erasmus Darwin Leavitt, Jr., was one of America's foremost designers of large steam engines and his equipment was admired for its efficiency. He was born in Lowell, Massachusetts in 1836 and died in Cambridge, Mass. in 1916. Leavitt apprenticed in the Lowell Manufacturing Company machine shop. Later he was in charge of constructing the engine for the U.S.S. Hartford in Providence, R.I. After serving in the Navy during the Civil War and teaching steam engineering at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, he opened a private practice as a mechanical engineer in 1867.

Leavitt received recognition for a pumping engine constructed in 1874 in Lynn, Mass. His success brought him to Europe, where he met Professor Riedler of the Royal Polytechnic School, Berlin, who granted Leavitt rights to use the Riedler pump and valve gear in the U.S. Leavitt was the first recipient of an honorary PH.D. in Engineering from Stevens Institute of Technology in 1884. He was an original member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and was elected president of the ASME in 1883. Leavitt also was a Fellow in the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Chestnut Hill engine is Leavitt's only known surviving work. The name plate reads: "Boston Water Works, Riedler Pumping Engine, Designed by E. D. Leavitt. Built by N. F. Palmer, Jr. and Co., Quintard Iron Works, New York." The engine was constructed 1892-94; although the principal castings were U.S. manufactured, some parts were forged by the Krupp works in Germany and are so labeled. The Leavitt engine was designated a National Historic Mechanical Engineering Landmark by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in 1973. The Smithsonian Institution displays a scale model of it.

The Chestnut Hill complex served Boston for over 100 years. It began to be phased out in the 1940s with the completion of the City Tunnel, directly from the Quabbin Reservoir. Earth from the City Tunnel was used to fill the Lawrence Basin, purchased in 1950 by Boston College. The completion of the Dorchester Tunnel in the mid-1970s, ending service from Chestnut Hill.

3.2 Summary of architectural significance — Each individual component at Chestnut Hill — the Bradlee Basin, the high and low service pumping stations, the gate houses, the greenbelt and driveway — is significant in its own right. As an intact complex, the structures and landscape achieve even greater significance, and are thought to be the finest and most intact 19th century complex of the metropolitan water system.

Chestnut Hill Driveway and Landscaping — The Chestnut Hill reservoir landscaping, dating from 1866-70, is an excellent, early example of the picturesque style. It is the first large-scale rural park-like setting to be developed by the City of Boston, even before the Park Commission was established in 1874. The Water Board decided, based largely on citizen opinion, to create the Driveway in the grandest possible manner. When completed the Chestnut Hill reservoir offered Bostonians a beautiful carriage drive or promenade in clean air, out Beacon Street and over the Brighton road, far from the impure city air.

The Chestnut Hill reservoir landscaping was extolled in Boston guidebooks throughout the last quarter of the 19th century and the early decades of the 20th century. Boston Illustrated, 1878, carried superlatives in its description:

The Chestnut Hill Reservoir is not only a great benefit to the city in its practical uses, it is also a great pleasure resort. A magnificent driveway, varying from sixty to eighty feet in width, surrounds the entire work, and is one of the greatest attractions of the suburbs of Boston. It is, in fact, the most popular drive in the vicinity.

In King's Hand Book of Boston (7th ed. 1885) parks were titled "The Lungs of the City" and the walks and drives of Chestnut Hill were listed as being "much enjoyed" by its neighbors who lived in attractive estates on the wooded hill overlooking the reservoir from the east.

The 1916 publication, A Guide Book to Boston states:

All around the winding outlines of the basin runs a trim driveway, and beside it a smooth gravel footpath. On all sides of the lake are symmetrical knolls, covered with forest trees and the greenest of turf. The banks to the water's edge are sodded and bordered with flowering shrubs; and the stonework, which in one place carries the road across a natural chasm, and the great natural ledges, are mantled over the clinging vines, and in autumns are aflame with the crimson of the Ampelopsis and the Virginia creeper.

The park-like development of Chestnut Hill reservoir was first discussed by the Water Board in 1866. Preliminary instructions to the City Engineer, Crafts, were for a road no less than 80 feet in width. Crafts laid out a crushed gravel surface, as was done for Boston's finer streets. The Board also contributed to the aesthetics of the design. Nathaniel Bradlee describes the drive in the 1868 history of Boston's water works:

... approximately eighty feet in width; compromising that width in cases of fine shade trees, and of ledges which may add picturesqueness . . . The road follows the rise and the descent of the ground, and except where it passes through groves or around rocks, lies upon the margin of the Reservoir, or keeps the water in sight, thus avoiding monotony, and affording beautiful views for the whole distance.

Bradlee, member of the Cochituate Water Board from 1865-1871, first biographer of the City water system, and Water Board president from 1868-71 was most likely the person who added the aesthetic principles to Crafts' engineering knowledge in laying out the Driveway. At the age of seventeen Bradlee began training in the office of George M. Dexter, a prominent mid-19th century Boston architect. In subsequent years Bradlee became Dexter's successor and was well-known in Boston for the design of banks, churches, railroad stations, hotels and apartments, office buildings, schools, and blocks of innumerable bow fronts in the South End. Walter Kilham in Boston After Bulfinch attributed 500 Boston buildings to Nathaniel J. Bradlee. Aside from being a prolific Boston architect, Bradlee made a civic contribution as a member of the Water Board. He earned the honor of having the larger basin at Chestnut Hill reservoir named after him.

Construction of the Driveway was expected to cost $125,000 — the final cost was over $200,000. The crowning element was a triumphal granite entrance arch, erected in 1870 to commemorate the water works. In the early 1900s the arch was removed for street widening.

According to Cynthia Zaitsevsky's Frederick Law Olmsted and the Boston Park System, Chestnut Hill Driveway was included in a 1887 plan to link the Emerald Necklace with other parks in Boston including Chestnut Hill Reservoir and Marine Park in South Boston. The plan was titled, in part "... Public Ways adapted to Pleasure Travel." Olmsted had designed and improved sections of Commonwealth Avenue in Brighton and Beacon Street in Brookline, the two major roads leading to Chestnut Hill. This created a loop with the previously laid-out Chestnut Hill Driveway; Olmsted called this the Chestnut Hill Circuit.

High Service Station — The first Chestnut Hill pumping station is an excellent example of the Richardsonian Romanesque style. It is considered one of the finest works of Boston architect, Arthur Vinal.

The High Service station was built in 1887-1888. Vinal was one of many admiring architects who worked in the style which Richardson has been credited with creating. Richardson's genius lay in his handling of common late 19th century eclectic idioms with a powerful simplicity and coherence. Whereas Victorian designs abandoned focus in favor of surface richness, Richardson made beautiful carving and lush surface treatment subordinate to mass, volume, and scale. Large public buildings became the Richardsonian hallmark, and in the late 1880s many cities built libraries, city halls, schools, post offices, and churches in the style.

The Chestnut Hill High Service station is bold in its use of granite and freestone in cathedral-like grandeur for a strictly utilitarian building. The broad, open site is well-suited to Richardsonian massing and horizontality. The Wheelwright & Haven addition of 1887-89 is sensitive to the original design in terms of form and surface treatment. The Chestnut Hill pumping station is a very lively design; the details in the tower are particularly striking, and the bold exterior is well-suited to the two-story steam engines which it was built to house.

According to a 1910 publication by the Metropolitan Water Board, the total expenditure made for the original pumping station and addition was approximately $265,000. Contractors for the original construction of 1887-88 included Collins & Ham, builders; Donahue Bros., masonry; Jeremiah Carew, free-stone; Edward Marley & Bros., copper work; John McLaren, carpentry; Walworth Manufacturing Co., steam pipes; Cofrode & Saylor, iron roofs; and George R. Clarke & Co., tile work. C. A. Dodge & Co. was the contractor for the 1897-99 addition, and the steel work was executed by Edward Kendall & Sons.

Arthur H. Vinal (1854-1923) practiced architecture in Boston and was City Architect from 1884-88. At various times he was in partnership with Fowler, Doge, and Tracy. Vinal designed many houses on Bay State Road and Commonwealth Avenue, Colonial Apartments at 382 Commonwealth, Kelsey Building on Tremont Street, the Robert Brigham Hospital, Globe (now Center) Theatre at 686 Washington, Boston City Hospital Nurses Dormitory at Harrison Avenue and East Springfield, and his own residence at Melville and Alton in Dorchester. As City Architect he designed several schools and submitted a design for the Boston Public Library in the Richardsonian Romanesque style.

Some controversy surrounded the construction of the High Service building and the office of city architect. The Freestone Cutter's Association of Boston charged that Jeremiah Carew had supplied inferior stone and workmanship. There were thirteen City hearings on the issue which spanned four months and 524 pages of transcripts. The final comment by the Freestone Association was Vinal "... was at least remiss and negligent ..." in his supervision.

The office of City Architect was held by five men: George A. Clough, 1874-83; Charles J. Bateman, 1883-84; Arthur H. Vinal, 1884-88; Charles J. Bateman, 1888-89; Harrison H. Atwood (James C. Tucker assisting), 1889-91; and Edmund M. Wheelwright, 1891-95. The position was created to raise the quality of buildings which the City had gotten through private commissions. However, by Vinal's term there were serious questions about the City Architect's ability to improve matters. The American Architect and Building News cited (Feb. 1886) that schools in Boston cost twice as much as those in Chicago. Wheelwright prepared a report when he took office to clarify the record (City Document No. 136, 1891). Much of the blame for high costs of operating the office was placed on the practice of splitting work into small contracts. Wheelwright's report did not help Vinal: it showed 13.5% administrative costs for the years of 1887-88 when the High Service station was being built, almost three times the prevailing architect's commission rate of 5%. Wheelwright attempted to save professional face by lowering the cost of the office of 3% during his term. However, the City, fearful that successors might not be so conscientious, abolished it for an Office of Consulting Architect in 1896.

Edmund M. Wheelwright (1854-1912), also a prominent Boston architect, was born in Roxbury, Massachusetts. He was a Harvard graduate, a student at MIT and the Ecole des Beaux Arts, and an employee of Peabody & Stearns and McKim, Mead & White. The subway headhouses at Park Street on the Common are similar in style to the Effluent Gate House No. 2. As City Architect Wheelwright designed several Boston City Hospital buildings and schools.

The partnership with Parkman B. Haven (1853-1943) began in 1889; a second partner, Edward A. Hoyt, joined the firm in the 1890s. The firm prepared plans for several large public buildings including Horticultural Hall, New England Conservatory of Music, the Opera House of 1908, Jordan Hall, and the State Historical Building in the Fenway. Wheelwright was a consulting architect to Guy Lowell on the design of the Museum of Fine Arts. He died in Dedham after having spent two years in a sanitarium in Connecticut as the result of a nervous breakdown attributed to overwork. Wheelwright was elected a fellow of the American Institute of Architects in 1901. He authored School Architecture (1901) and articles for professional magazines.

Low Service pumping station — This building is one of Boston's very few public buildings designed in the Beaux Arts Classical style. It is also significant as a work designed by the nationally prominent firm of Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge. The Low Service station was constructed as part of the massive expansion plan initiated by the Metropolitan Water Board. Its pumps provided water to Spot Pond, Stoneham, and directly to the city. In addition to housing pumps and engines, the tower contained an overflow tank which could hold 31,000 gallons of water. Coal for the engines was brought directly from a siding of the Boston and Albany railroad tracks at the rear of the station.

Beaux-Arts Classicism takes its name from the Academy des Beaux Arts in Paris. In the last quarter of the 19th century many American architectural students went to Paris and returned to the U.S. to lead successful careers. The style called Beaux-Arts Classicism is set apart from the Neo-Classical Revival and the Renaissance Revival styles with which it was contemporaneous. Characteristic elements of the style include paired or even clustered columns, deeply sculptural ornament and a high parapet or attic. Windows may be enframed by free-standing columns, balustraded sill, and pedimented entablature on top. It is a style almost exclusively used for civic architecture.

The Low Service station exemplifies the shift in American architecture since the High Service station had been built. High style public design was classical; Victorian colors and forms were abandoned for symmetry and classical lines.

The classicalism of the turn of the century used all the modern technology available in its structural underpinnings. Even though the exteriors were faced with stone and made to appear to be masonry construction, the buildings usually contained steel or reinforced concrete. The Chestnut Hill Low Service station is no exception. The foundation sits on previous landfill with boulders, rocks, and earth from the reservoir basins. Plans show iron plates below the three original engines and a metal tank in the tower.

In the event that emergency service is required, two 1974, solar gas turbine engines, housed in the low service building, are still functional.

The Low Service station was built by Norcross Brothers, contractors for many H. H. Richardson buildings and later for Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge. The amount of the Contract was $182,659.50.*

*Given the profile work of the Olmsted firm in and around Boston at the time of the construction of the Low Service building, an attempt was made to investigate the possibility that landscape work by Olmsted may have been done at Chestnut Hill. Information derived from the Library of Congress Manuscripts Department, holders of the Olmsted firm's papers, has revealed that the firm's only involvement in projects at Chestnut Hill was an instance of the recommendation of possible sub-foremen in May, 1904 (work related to the construction of the Low Service building).

Richardson's successor firm, Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge, designed many noteworthy buildings throughout the United States, such as the Lionberger, Tiffany, and Mallinkridt buildings in St. Louis; the original Stanford University campus; the Art Institute and the Chicago Public Library; Vassar Chapel; Government Hospital for the Insane, Washington D.C.; Brown University Library; and buildings at the University of Chicago. The Ames Building, a Shepley, Rutan & Coolidge design, was the highest building in Boston when it was completed in 1892 — the firm located their offices on the top floor. Important Boston area commissions include South Terminal Station, Harvard Medical School, the Easton Buildings on State Street, the Weld Building on Federal Street, the First Parish Church in Brookline, the Episcopal Theological School Library in Cambridge, many houses, the Public Library in New London, Conn., and the First Congressional Church in Fall River, Mass.

Charles Rutan (1851-1914) was born in Newark, N.J., and trained in Boston in the office of Gambrill & Richardson. George Shepley (1860-1903) was born in St. Louis and educated there at Washington University and at MIT. He married Richardson's oldest daughter and died an untimely death at the age of 43. Charles Allerton Coolidge (1858-1936) was born in Boston and educated at Harvard and MIT. His later partners included George C. Shattuck from 1914-1922, and also Coolidge, Shepley (Henry R., son of George), Bulfinch, and Abbott in 1925. Coolidge was married to George Shepley's sister. He was elected a Fellow of the AIA in 1891, he received an honorary Doctor of Arts degree from Harvard in 1906, he was president of the Boston Society of Architects, and he held many public and honorary positions in the course of his long career.

Effluent Gate House No. 1. This is the first structure built in the Chestnut Hill Reservoir complex. Constructed between 1869-70, this gate house contained the major control gates for the Chestnut Hill Reservoir. The structure was constructed to house four pipes, although only two were used. In 1874, two hydraulic gates were installed.

Effluent Gate House No. 2 — This gate house was built in 1900-01 as a major component of Metropolitan Water Board's expansion plans, to supply water to the low and high service pumping stations. The Renaissance Revival design is by Wheelwright & Haven, who also designed the High Service addition. It was built by John S. Jacob & Sons for an estimated cost of $10,000. The structure houses three hydraulic gates which control three 60" mains, beneath a cast iron floor.

Connection Chamber — This structure, adjacent to the High Service station, was used to take water from the Cochituate Aqueduct by a four-foot main, to the High Service station. This simple, Milford granite structure, was built by the Norcross Brothers.

Buildings and structures with contributing significance — The puddingstone garage is architecturally significant in terms of its relationship to the property as a whole.

Contributing background buildings and structures — The four Pipe Yard buildings, while not significant individually, are part of the completeness of the complex; they do not detract architecturally from the whole composition.

The George Middleton House. George Middleton, a colonel in the American Revolution and leader of the all-black company, "Bucks of America," built this house in 1797. It is noted as the oldest home built by a black person on Beacon Hill. Located at 5 Pinckney Street.

Constitution Museum, open 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Inside are exhibits about the history of "Old Ironsides" from 1794 to the present, including miniatures, cross sections, biographies of captains and items from onboard. Admission: adults, $2; seniors, $1.50; children, $1, with group rates available. Located in the Charlestown Navy Yard, 426-1812.

PENAL INSTITUTIONS DEPARTMENT

January 5, 1990

Felix Arroyo,
Director of Personnel Management.

Dear Sir,
On March 1, 1989, Mr. Charles J. Abate, Jr. was provisionally appointed to the position of Director of Social Services (RC-17) for the Penal Institutions Department.

Mr. Abate will serve as Legal Advisor for the Penal Institutions Department and will be responsible for all matters involving labor relations and resolution of grievances. He will coordinate with the Law Department, Workers' Compensation Service, and Office of Personnel Management as the Department's representative in the management of all claims involving work related injury to employees of the Department. From 1984 to 1987, Mr. Abate served with the United States Air Force. During this time he performed a wide variety of administrative/supervisory/managerial duties including Squadron Commander at Royal Air Force Lakenheath, United Kingdom, where he was responsible for interpreting and implementing nuclear security regulations, investigating alleged offenses under the Uniform Code of Military Justice and imposing appropriate punishments, evaluating the health, morale and welfare of personnel and making improvements, and briefing senior commanders and junior enlisted personnel. He was also the Deputy Chief of Staff for Security at the Strategic Air Command (SAC), Offutt AFB, Nebraska. There he was responsible for acting as the key point in SAC for the review of all plans affecting the security of SAC assets. HERB GLEASON NAMED TO PARK COMMISSION

Boston Mayor Raymond L. Flynn has named Herbert P. Gleason as Associate Commissioner to the seven member Parks Commission.

In announcing the appointment, Mayor Flynn said, "Herb Gleason has served the City of Boston in many capacities during his professional career: as a public servant, attorney, journalist, health specialist, academic, and social activist. The Parks Commission is delighted that he will now apply his considerable talents and judgement to the city's historic parks system."

The Boston Parks Commission meets monthly to discuss parks policy and operational issues such as capital improvements, name changes, rules and regulations, and to hear public comments on specific neighborhood park issues. The Commission is headed by Lawrence Dwyer, Commissioner of Parks and Recreation.

Herb Gleason is presently Counsel at Smith, McNulty & Kearney in Boston. A graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, Gleason was Corporation Counsel for the City of Boston from 1968-1979.

Gleason is President of the Salzburg Seminar; Secretary of the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston; Vice President of the Massachusetts Health Data Consortium, and Director of the Boston Forum for Health Action. He has written several books on health topics, and is a Trustee at the Brigham & Women's Hospital.

Gleason begins his job as Associate Commissioner this month. Other Associate Commissioners on the Park Commission include: Victoria L. Williams, William Walczak, Charles Titus, and William Doherty.

Dwyer, appointed Parks Commissioner by Mayor Flynn in March 1989, has enhanced the Park Commission's involvement in the revitalization of the Boston parks system. Under Dwyer, the Parks Commission expects to actively examine the environmental impacts of development and open space management in Boston.

Commissioner Dwyer expects to fill the remaining open slot on the Parks Commission in the near future.

PRESIDENT, CITY COUNCIL

NO. 16

CIVIC DESIGN COMMISSION (BCDC)

The City of Boston now has in place a new 11-member body, the Boston Civic Design Commission (BCDC), to advise the city in the review of developments and new plans. Mayor Raymond L. Flynn recently announced the appointment of the 11-member Commission, five of whom are urban design professionals. Five other members of the Commission consist of representatives from various community and business groups. Mayor Flynn said, "Since I became Mayor of Boston in 1984, a priority of my administration has been to make the development review process in Boston a truly open and public process. To that end, we have created neighborhood councils and planning and zoning advisory committees in neighborhoods throughout Boston. We have also adopted rules and procedures to govern the ways in which development review is conducted in our city. And we have established linkage policies to ensure that the economic benefits of development are shared with residents of Boston's neighborhoods."

"The establishment of the Boston Civic Design Commission represents yet another important component in Boston's development policy. By assisting and advising the city in reviewing the design of new projects and district guidelines developed by the BRA, the Design Commission will plan an important role in safeguarding Boston's unique character. As Bostonians, we all have a responsibility to protect this historic city while providing and expanding economic opportunities for all. I know that members of the Commission look forward to fulfilling this obligation."

John de Monchaux, dean of the School of Architecture and Planning at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, will serve as Chairman of the Commission.

Members of the Commission are:

Dean John de Monchaux (Chair BCDC)

Ms. Karen Alshuler

Skidmore Owings and Merrill

Mrs. Nancy Collidge, Director

Society for the Preservation of

New England Antiquities

Mr. S. Joseph Hoffman, Chairman

Ingalls, Quinn and Johnson

Mr. Syvalia Hymann III, President

Mrs. Carol Johnson

Carol Johnson and Associates

Mr. Alex Krieger

Mr. William Pineo, Vice President

Mr. William Rawn

Mr. Robert Thault, Regional Director

Mr. Donald Stull

Steven Coyle, Director of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, said, "With the Design Commission now operational, we have brought to fruition one of the key points of Mayor Flynn's planning and development policies. We feel the BCDC can serve as a forum for the public at large to comment and express its concerns about new projects. This Commission provides a public forum where comments and ideas can flow from communities to city agencies responsible for reviewing proposed projects. We know this Commission will provide us with a valuable perspective in evaluating new projects."

The Commission was created by passage of an amendment Article 28 Boston Zoning Code. The Commission has the authority to review large-scale projects (defined as exceeding 100,000 square feet) and projects of special significance, that is, projects in a historic district or close to landmark buildings. In addition, the Commission will also review civic projects and district design guidelines adopted by the Boston Redevelopment Authority for both downtown areas and the city's neighborhoods.

Recently passed state legislation Bill No. H2925 allows local design professionals to sit on the Commission while continuing to do business in the city.

If the BCDC is dissatisfied with a proposed project, the members can advise the BRA to request a redesign of the project. However, if the Mayor or BRA disagrees with the advisory recommendation of the Commission and decides to approve the project, the reasons for approval must be made in writing to the Commission.

John de Monchaux, Chairman of the Commission, said: "The Commission begins its task at a time of relative calm on the city's development front and at a time of very considerable activity in the city's task of proposing guidelines and zoning plans. We will seek to come alongside the major development projects already under way in a manner that will respect the civic design efforts already invested by the BRA and the many advisory committees. At the same time we will be looking to establish our own role as a critical forum on civic design issues at key steps in the design process. The Commission also welcomes the current emphasis on guidelines and plan preparation and looks forward to working with the BRA to shape these guidelines in ways that will underwrite the quality of new developments everywhere in Boston."

At its initial meeting in February, BCDC began its review of a proposed development plan for the Prudential Center. A BCDC subcommittee on design met with designers of the Prudential project and submitted a report on the project to the Commission in early April.

The BCDC received presentations on new zoning and urban design guidelines for Chinatown and new zoning for the North End/Downtown Waterfront. At the March 6th meeting (BCDC will meet the first Tuesday of every month), the Commission received presentations on the draft master plan for the Yard's End of the Charlestown Navy Yard, the Commonwealth Center project which is proposed for Washington Street and the Olmsted Plaza project, which involves the renovation of the Sears Building on Park Drive.

Four of the Commission members have been appointed to serve the following terms: two will serve for two years and two for one year. As the term of the other commission members expire, their reappointments will follow. The chairperson of the Commission is appointed by the Mayor and will serve a term of two years.

The Boston Redevelopment Authority will provide staff for the Commission and will otherwise assist it by providing technical and administrative support under the direction of Eric Schmidt, Director for Downtown Planning.

Members of the Commission will receive no compensation from the City.

JAMAICA PLAIN FARM RECEIVES GRANT

Since 1977, Jamaica Plain families have been growing their own vegetables at the Southwest Corridor Community Farm on Lamartine Street — marking their garden beds with scavenged railroad ties and lumber scraps, watering with hoses that often must be dragged across other people's crops, and walking carefully to avoid stepping on someone else's plants while strolling through the Farm. Thanks to a $90,000 grant from the Grassroots program of the City of Boston's Public Facilities Department (PFD), Jamaica Plain gardeners can look forward to a new Southwest Corridor Community Farm.

"Through this Grassroots grant, neighbors will benefit from a completely renovated garden space," said Lisa G. Chapnick, director of PFD. "It takes more than housing to make a neighborhood livable. And with Urban Edge developing garden beds in tandem with its co-ops next door, maybe we're setting a trend."

The new farm will have structured garden beds, permanent fencing and signage, new pathways, and a water conserving irrigation system that's piped into each individual plot. The Farm will also serve as a "Central Park" for residents of the adjacent 50-unit housing cooperative now being developed by Urban Edge with PFD assistance. In addition, Urban Edge is planning to include several garden plots on its own grounds.

When the project begins, the 26,500 square foot site will be stripped of fittings and topsoil. The topsoil will be stored and enriched with compost while work — which includes excavation for a new water line, the installation of up to 48 defined garden beds, and the creation of clear pathways surfaced with compacted stone dust — is being done. Special plots — two th new wheelchair accessible, three to be used as demonstration gardens, and a large bed which will accommodate as many as 20 public school student gardeners — are also planned. The striped topsoil will be returned before the erection of new interior fencing and gate.

"Since we first began gardening on land, everything — from our fencing to our watering system — has been homemade or improvised. Much of the material we've used couldn't be expected to last much longer," said Leroy McDard, director of Southwest Corridor Community Farms. "The work we are doing will serve future generations of Jamaica Plain residents. What we are looking at now is a garden space that is here today, here tomorrow, and here after."

City's Grassroots program helps nonprofits to reclaim publicly owned land by turning it into community gardens, tot lots, and other public spaces through the awarding of grants. This effort has been matched by nearly $2,000 from other sources.

PROJECTS CREATING HUNDREDS OF JOBS GET INITIAL OKAY FOR 53 MILLION DOLLARS IN BONDS FROM CITY OF BOSTON FINANCING AGENCY

Proposed Shopping Center 315 Centre Street, Boston

Three Boston development projects have received preliminary approval for $53 million in financing from the Boston Industrial Development Financing Authority (BIDFA), an affiliate of the Economic Development and Industrial Corporation of Boston (EDIC). The projects will bring more than 1,000 jobs to Boston's neighborhoods. BIDFA has given the initial go-ahead to $18 million in bonds for a neighborhood shopping plaza in Jamaica Plain, $18 million in bonds for a commercial printing facility and dock and wharf renovation in South Boston, and a $32.8 million bond for the purchase and updating of the James River paper mill in Hyde Park. The Authority took action on these projects at its March meeting.

BIDFA provides taxable and tax-exempt financing to qualified companies looking to build or expand in Boston. BIDFA financing looks for companies employing significant numbers of Boston residents, women, and minorities, and for projects that show that expansion will result in the retention or creation of jobs.

"The financing assistance to these projects comes at an important time as we continue our efforts to stimulate economic growth for Boston," said Mayor Raymond L. Flynn. "The projects will benefit the residents of Boston's neighborhoods in both construction and permanent jobs."

Authority members also elected Donald A. Gillis the new Executive Director of BIDFA. Gillis was recently appointed Executive Director of EDIC, with the strong support of Mayor Flynn and key business and community leaders. The Economic Development and Industrial Corporation exists to create and retain jobs in the City. "The BIDFA Board sees, as I do, that every project we're able to provide financing for is a vehicle for creating jobs for Boston residents," said Gillis. "The jobs that will come from the projects in Hyde Park, South Boston and Jamaica Plain are examples of how the City has been aggressive in seeing that neighborhood residents have access to good employment opportunities."

The shopping plaza at 315 Centre Street in Jamaica Plain expects to generate 36 full-time and 34 part-time jobs. The developer also plans to contribute 1,200 square feet of space for a day care center.

In South Boston, the Harbor Gateway development proposal calls for using 7 million dollars to build a 44,000 square-foot commercial printing facility — creating 94 jobs; and $11 million in financing is proposed for the renovation of a dock and wharf for the unloading and handling of fish, creating some 180 jobs. The printing facility and dock and wharf are a part of Harbor Gateway's $50 million development proposal to be located at EDIC's Marine Industrial Park off Summer Street in South Boston. The BIDFA Board directed Harbor Gateway to meet with the community within 60 days to discuss the project and financing.

In Hyde Park, $32.8 million from bonds will be used by the new owners of the James River paper mill who expect to employ more than 170 workers within two years.

BIDFA is actively seeking qualified employers who need financing to build or expand. For more information on financing programs that might help your Boston business, call 725-EDIC.

BRA PROPOSES BIOMEDICAL RESEARCH AT SOUTH STATION

South Station

TUFTS INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH CENTER

Jung/Brannen Associates, Inc. Architects and Planners February, 1990

Three major research institutions and development teams have responded to the Boston Redevelopment Authority's request for proposals to develop a major biomedical research complex on air rights above track area at South Station.

Proposals for the South Station development were received from Forest City Development, Olympia and York Companies, and Tufts University Development Corporation.

The BRA plan calls for development of approximately 500,000 square feet of space for research related activities as part of the city's effort to promote growth of its research economy. The BRA's overall development program for the area also includes construction of hotel and conference facilities, commercial office and retail space, and a parking facility, all of which will total an additional 1.5 million square feet of space.

Mayor Raymond L. Flynn said, "Boston has always played a leading role in medical and scientific research. But in the 1990s, we have a unique opportunity to promote our research economy so that it provides great economic opportunities for people in every neighborhood of the city. From the response we have received to our South Station plan, it is obvious that developers and research institutions are extremely interested in helping Boston to expand this segment of our economy."

Development proposals include:

- Technopolis

Developer: Forest City Development/Robert M. Weinberg

Institution: Boston University (as a limited partner)

Architect: DeStefano/Goettsch & Stull and Lee

Construction Consultant: Beacon Construction Company

- Tufts International Research Center

Developer: Tufts University Development Corp. (TUDC)

In addition, Trizec Properties,
Lena Park Community Development
Corp., and the Beacon Companies submitted letters expressing interest in joining a development team.

Economic benefits from the project include an estimated $11 million in property taxes and $7.5 million in linkage funds to create affordable housing in Boston's neighborhoods.
Approximately 1,800 construction jobs will be generated by the project and there will be 4,000 permanent jobs created once the project is complete.

BRA Director, Stephen Coyle, said, "The South Station air rights project represents an economic development initiative that will help diversify the city's economic base. The 'new economies' to be cultivated and developed at South Station complement and balance the service economy which fueled Boston's growth in the 1980s, and set the future course for the city's economic and employment growth in the decade ahead."

The BRA also anticipates the substantial benefits from the air rights project will be directed to the abutting neighborhoods of Chinatown and South Station. The BRA and the Chinatown/South Cove Neighborhood
Council are currently preparing a Chinatown Community Plan which will direct future community growth.
It is anticipated that the South Station project will assist in the overall implementation of that plan, including new employment opportunities, job training, business opportunities and the production of affordable housing.

Bill Moy, Co-moderator of the

Chinatown/South Cover Neighborhood Council, said, "All the proposals are exciting and provide substantial benefits to the nearby communities. We look forward to working with the BRA and the development teams to bring this project to fruition."

The BRA's request for proposals also stipulates that the South Station project will provide substantial contributions towards the provision of affordable housing units in South
Boston and the creation of new jobs for residents of South Boston.

As part of the city's effort to direct growth of Boston's research economy towards South Station, the Boston Zoning Commission recently adopted permanent zoning for the South Station area. The new zoning provides for the potential designation of a Planned Development Area at South Station, one of the few locations in downtown where a PDA is allowed.
In addition, research and research-related uses and institutional uses are allowed at South Station under the new zoning.

puppets, character dolls, and pop-up and board books.

AN "ARAB MOSAIC" AT THE BPL'S BRIGHTON BRANCH LIBRARY

Former U.S. Peace Corps volunteers present "An Arab Mosaic," a series of three lectures on North Yemen, Tunisia, and Morocco, at the Boston Public Library's Brighton Branch, 40 Academy Hill Road, which began April 26. All of the lectures begin at 7:30 p.m. and followed by a discussion panel. The complete schedule is as follows:

April 26th: "North Yemen" — Located at the southwestern tip of the Arabian peninsula. North Yemen is the land from which the Queen of Sheba traveled to meet King Solomon. Former Peace Corps volunteers Rolf E. Epton, a civil engineer and construction manager, and Mary L. White, an urban planner, will explore the culture, history, tribes, holidays, traditional markets, and architecture of this remote, mountainous country, and will describe its people who consider themselves the original Arabs.

May 3rd: "Tunisia" — Located at the crossroads of four worlds — Africa, Islam, the Mediterranean, and the Arab world, Tunisia's historic city of Carthage was founded by the Phoenicians about 800 B.C. Since then this small North African country has been invaded by the Romans, Vandals, Byzantines, Arabs, Turks, Spaniards, Italians, and French. Bradley and Barbara MacDonald, a husband and wife team who taught English as a second language at the Institute of Modern Languages in Tunisia from 1972 to 1974, will describe the culture of this land the medieval Arab geographers called al-azizet-el-Maghrib, "The Island of the West."

May 10th: "Morocco" — Morocco's Sultan Mohammed was the first foreign head of state to recognize the new republic of the United States under

George Washington. Morocco is the western-most Arab country in Africa. Join former Peace Corps volunteers James Kostaras, an architect with the provincial government in southern Morocco, and William A. Lawrence, who taught English and served as a health educator in Morocco, as they travel from the casbahs and villages on the edge of the Sahara Desert along the caravan routes to the Mediterranean.

Two photo exhibits will also be held at the Brighton Branch in conjunction with the lecture series.

"Images of Tunisia," a photo exhibit by Derek Szabo, a freelance photographer from the Boston area, were on display from April 23 to 27, and "Images of Morocco," a photo exhibit by William A. Lawrence, a former Peace Corps volunteer, will be on display from May 7 to 12.

All programs and exhibits are free and open to the public. Seating is limited. For additional information, please call the Brighton Branch Library at 782-6032.

DAVID HALBERSTAM TO DELIVER MOLONEY LECTURE AT THE BPL

David Halberstam, Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and distinguished author, will deliver the 1990 Francis Moloney Lecture on Thursday, May 3rd, at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square as the BPL's public lecture series continues.

Halberstam is the author of 11 books, including his highly praised trilogy on power in America, "The Best and the Brightest," "The Powers That Be," and "The Reckoning." Of his book, "The Breaks of the Game," the story of a season in professional basketball, the Washington Post said, "the best book Halberstam has written." Of "The Amateurs," the story of four young men's quest for an Olympic gold medal in sculling, Newsweek said, "an astonishing job of reporting and an extremely moving one."

His latest work, "The Summer of '49," is of particular interest to New Englanders in that it describes his magnificent journey through the 1949 pennant race, in which two legendary rivals — the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees — battled down to a winner-take-all final game of the season. Halberstam brings the passion, the penetrating journalistic skills, and the capacity for capturing human drama with rare intimacy that have made him one of America's most popular writers.

The Francis Moloney Lecture was established by the Boston Public Library in honor of the library's late assistant director who made a major contribution to the development of the BPL and to the intellectual and civic well-being of the community.

A native of Charlestown and a longtime resident of Jamaica Plain, Mr. Moloney was one of the most knowledgeable persons on the history of Boston and the Boston Irish. No one knew as much about Boston Irish politicians, such as James Michael Curley and John B. Hynes, as did Frank Moloney.

A Boston Latin School graduate, he earned both undergraduate and graduate degrees from Harvard and a master's in education from Boston Teachers College.

After stints as a history teacher at English High and a lieutenant in the Navy during World War II, Mr. Moloney served as the executive secretary of the Boston Municipal Research Bureau. But his great interest in learning and literature led him to the library in 1952, where he headed the business and legislative operations until his tragic death in 1979.

In a tribute to Mr. Moloney following his death at the hands of a hit-and-run driver on the Jamaica way, "The Boston Irish News" wrote, "Frank Moloney was the kind of Bostonian that both John Marquand and Edwin O'Connor would have written novels about — he was scholarly and spirited, genuine and generous, loyal and loving. In short, he was a gentleman in every sense of the word."

Previous Moloney lecturers have included Thomas Flanagan, Doris Kearns Goodwin, Seamus Heaney, William V. Shannon, and Thomas H. O'Connor.

The 6 p.m. lecture will take place in the Rabb Lecture Hall of the Central Library in Copley Square and is open to the public. Seating is limited.

DORCHESTER HISTORICAL SERIES AT LOWER MILLS BRANCH LIBRARY

A four-part slide/lecture series on the history of Dorchester will be held at the Boston Public Library's Lower Mills Branch Library, 27 Richmond Street in Dorchester, on Thursday evenings at 7 p.m. starting May 3rd.

The series, entitled "You Must Remember This: Dorchester Revisited," will be presented by Dorchester historian Anthony Sammarco, former curator of the Dorchester Historical Society, and will cover the early years in the historical and cultural development of the Dorchester community.

The subjects and schedule are as follows:

May 3 — "Lost Lower Mills": The area we know as Lower Mills was once called the "Chocolate Village" in the 19th century; since 1634, when the first grist mill was opened on the banks of the Neponset River, the area has had an industrial connotation. The aspect of workers' housing, and mill managers' housing remains to remind us of the village concept. This lecture will focus on the churches, mills, and houses that once comprised this area of Dorchester.

May 17 — "Dorchester Pottery": Founded in 1895 by George Henderson, the Dorchester Pottery Works remained one of the few stoneware manufacturers in the country until 10 years ago. The Hendersons, assisted by the Hill Family, produced commercial stoneware, supplementing their standard pottery with decorative pieces by World War II. Ethel Henderson, wife of the founder, implemented her New England designs on the stoneware, breathing new life into a business severely affected by the Great Depression.

May 24 — "Pope's Hill - Neponset": The area known as Neponset today was named for the Indian tribe that once inhabited the territory. The lands were used for farmland throughout the first two centuries of the settlement, however, after the War of 1812, small villas were built overlooking the harbor. The "Plymouth Road" (Neponset Avenue) was a major thoroughfare and was lined with many houses. This lecture will address the Pope Family, the Spauldings, the Trains, and the Pratts, all prominent families who developed the area.

May 31 — "Ashmont - A Street Car Suburb": Dorchester, after its annexation to Boston in 1870, attracted many new residents. With the Old Colony Railroad having been laid through the area before the Civil War, the bucolic setting of Ashmont attracted many wealthy Bostonians who built homes in the area. The Carruth brothers were to subdivide their estate, with the assistance of Luther Briggs, Jr., creating the quintessential "Street Car Suburb." With slides from 1870 to 1900, Mr. Sammarco will compare the street-scapes of today with those of a century ago.

The lectures are free and open to the public. For additional information, contact the Lower Mill Branch Library at 298-7841.

BPL'S "ASIAN FOCUS" PROGRAM REACHES OUT TO ASIAN COMMUNITIES

With approximately 20,000 Asians currently residing in the Boston area and surrounding communities, many of whom are recent arrivals from Cambodia, Thailand, and Vietnam, the Boston Public Library has launched "Asian Focus," an initiative to help the state's newest immigrants adjust to their new environment and culture.

Directed by Fran M. Grosso, senior reader and information librarian in the BPL's Adult's Services Section, and supported by federal grants administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, the Library has initiated a number of programs to assist in the acculturation process.

These include a recent trilingual performance by the American Chinese Art Society of traditional Chinese music and dance that featured authentic costumes from different time periods of Chinese history. Narrators explained the significance of the costumes and music and provided historical background during the performance which was attended by more than 1,000 persons of all ages. "It was really encouraging to see three generations of families attending together and enjoying the performances," said Fran Grosso, "and we have noticed a substantial increase in the utilization of our Chinese collections since then."

In a future related program, the Central Library in Copley Square will present a special series of Chinese films on three consecutive Monday nights beginning May 7th, especially for Chinese, Vietnamese, and Cambodians living in the Boston area. The films are all in Chinese with English subtitles.

On May 19th the BPL will present the Cambodian Folk Festival featuring the Angkor Dance Troupe of Lowell performing outdoors on the Dartmouth Street steps of the Research Library. This expressive art form, Cambodian folk dance features distinct movements and gestures. In contrast to the stricter and prescribed movements of classical dance traditionally performed in court, folk dance movements are spontaneous and easily express emotions.

The Boston Public Library has taken steps to increase its foreign language holdings and services in order to assist this rapidly expanding population. Armed with demographic research and their knowledge of both city's neighborhoods and existing library resources, Fran Grosso and staff targeted eight languages in which the Library needed to augment its collections: Spanish, French/Haitian, Vietnamese, Portuguese, Chinese, Khmer/Hmong, Lao, and Thai. The BPL then purchased books, videotapes, audiotapes, and mixed media sets for both adults and children to help the new immigrants in their acculturation. Special emphasis was placed on materials that could be shared by parents and children, such items as bilingual editions of folktales, regardless of English proficiency. More than half ems acquired are either in the targeted languages or are bilingual and about a quarter of the items are instructional materials to help those who are learning English as a second language.

Branch librarians were encouraged to select materials that would be helpful to their specific neighborhood constituencies. Those branches with a low demand for foreign language items or instructional materials still requested books and videos in English about their countries and cultures.

In presenting these programs the Boston Public Library is attempting to make known the importance of diverse immigrant populations in Massachusetts, including the Southeast Asians, and introducing them to the many resources of the BPL. Members of the various ethnic communities, in Boston and throughout the state, are encouraged to visit the BPL's neighborhood branch libraries and the Central Library in Copley Square. For more information, call the BPL's Adults' Services Section at 617 536-5400.

TUFTS ARENA THEATER PRESENTS

CLOUD 9

by Caryl Churchill

Directed by Marianne M. Kubik
April 24-28, 1990 at 8:00 P.M.

Tufts Arena Theater rounds out its 1989-90 season of major productions with Caryl Churchill's CLOUD 9, directed by Marianne M. Kubik, on April 24-28, 1990 at 8:00 p.m.

A cast of seven portrays fourteen characters throughout the two touching and funny acts of CLOUD 9. In Act One, Betty, the dutiful wife, is played by a man because she wants to be what men want her to be; Joshua, the black servant, is played by a white man because he wants to be what white men want him to be; and Edward, Clive and Betty's young son, is played by a woman because he cannot be the "real little boy" his father wants him to be. By Act Two, one hundred years have gone by, but only twenty-five years have passed for the characters. The family's structure and sexual roles are changing and the audience is witness to the poignant and personal metamorphosis of each character.

Tufts Arena Theater is located on Tufts' Medford Campus, about seven miles north of Boston. Tickets are $2.00 on Tuesday, $4.00 on Wednesday and Thursday, and $5.00 on Friday and Saturday. MasterCard and Visa are accepted. Group rates are available. For more information, please call 381-3493.

CITY OF BOSTON

Proceedings of City Council

Wednesday, September 13, 1989.

Regular meeting of the City Council held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, at 1 p.m., President IANNELLA in the chair and all members present.

OPENING OF MEETING

The Right Reverend Monsignor Joseph Lahoud, Our Lady of Cedars Church, Jamaica Plain, delivered the invocation, and the meeting was opened with the salute to the flag.

DISAPPROVING ORDER URGING BID OPENING SCHEDULED FOR AUGUST 8, 1989. RELEASE AGREEMENT FOR PARKING AREAS USED BY NORTH END PEOPLE BE DEFERRED

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 23, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I return herewith without my signature and disapproved an order passed by your Honorable Body August 7, 1989, Docket Number 1051, which urges me to defer the bid opening which was scheduled for August 8, 1989, at 10:00 a.m. The purpose of the deferral was to allow time to ascertain the facts pertaining to certain parking areas used by North End merchants and residents.

My reason for disapproval is that the bid opening had already occurred prior to the order being presented to me and, therefore, the order is moot. Furthermore, as this matter is now the subject of a recently-filed suit, it would be inadvisable for me to approve the order.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

(Annexed hereto is the order referred to.)

Assigned for further action.

DISAPPROVING ORDER THAT BRA INCLUDE INSURANCE COMPANIES AND PENSION FUNDS IN THEIR STUDY OF LENDING PRACTICES IN CITY

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 29, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I return herewith without my signature and disapproved an order passed by your Honorable Body on August 9, 1989, Docket Number 1068, which would require the Boston Redevelopment Authority to include insurance companies and pension funds in their study of lending practices in the City of Boston and to examine how those two funding sources can be fully utilized to meet community credit needs.

My reason for disapproval is that, as the City Council knows, the City's authority over the BRA is limited. The Council cites no authority for its ordering the BRA to act as proposed.

Although I am vetoing the order, I am told that the BRA's study is a comprehensive one as to the role of financial institutions in Boston's economy. One of the study's components will include information as to pension funds and insurance companies, particularly their participation in the secondary mortgage market and their investment in affordable housing.

Very truly yours,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Assigned for further action.

AUTHORIZING CITY TO ACCEPT AND EXPEND EEOG OF $6,128,114 TO INSURE HIGH QUALITY OF BOSTON PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

September 12, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I transmit herewith for your approval an order to accept and expend an Equal Education Opportunity Grant (EEOG) of $6,128,114.

The Equal Education Opportunity program, under chapter 188 of the Acts of 1985, was designed to insure that all communities will be able to build high quality educational systems. Under this program, the City of Boston is eligible to receive $6,128,114 in FY90 for direct instructional expenditures. Of this total, $1,867,534 must be allocated to improving basic skills instruction at those schools designated by the state as "opportunity schools."

The City had anticipated and accounted for the appropriate amount of funding from this grant when developing the School Department's operating budget.

Because of the importance of continuing to provide Boston Public Schools students a high quality education, I urge prompt consideration and passage by your Honorable Body.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Ordered, That the Mayor, acting on behalf of the City of Boston, be, and hereby is, authorized, in accordance with G. L. c.44, s.53A, to accept and expend a grant of $6,128,114 from the Equal Education Opportunity program for the purpose of insuring a high quality of education in the Boston Public Schools.

Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SALE OF APPROXIMATELY 1,114 SQUARE FEET OF LAND FOR $75,000, TO SUFFOLK UNIVERSITY SAID LAND BEING SUB-SURFACE PORTION OF CAMBRIDGE STREET IN BOSTON PROPER

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

August 23, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I transmit herewith for your approval an order for the sale of approximately 1,114 square feet of land for $75,000, said land being a sub-surface portion of Cambridge Street in the Boston Proper District of the City of Boston.

Suffolk University wishes to purchase this land to augment its existing property abutting Cambridge Street so as to more effectively carry out its redevelopment of this parcel and to continue its tradition of academic excellence in the City of Boston.

I urge your Honorable Body to pass this order as it has been determined that the subject property is no longer required for public purposes.

Respectfully,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Whereas, on June 20, 1989, Suffolk University petitioned the Public Improvement Commission to discontinue a sub-surface portion of the public way located on Cambridge Street, Boston Proper District, comprising approximately 1,114 square feet all as shown on a certain plan marked "City of Boston, Public Works Department, Engineering Division, Discontinuance Plan — Vertical; Cambridge Street Boston Proper, August 7, 1989, Gordon E. Barnes, Division Engineer"; and

Whereas, a duly authorized public hearing was held on July 6, 1989, for the proposed discontinuance, all abutters having been notified by certified mail of said hearing; and

Whereas, the Commission has determined that the discontinued area, owned in fee by the City of Boston, comprising approximately 1,114 square feet, is no longer required for public purposes, and after further determination, that said discontinued area has a fair market value of $75,000; now, therefore, be it

Ordered, that the Mayor of the City of Boston be, and he hereby is, authorized to execute and deliver to Suffolk University for the sum of $75,000 and instrument in writing conveying all of the City of Boston's right, title, and interest in and to the discontinued area herein described.

Referred to the Committee on Planning and Development.

Later in the session Coun. McCORMACK moved reconsideration of the above referral; reconsideration prevailed.

On motion of Coun. McCORMACK, the order was given its first reading, yeas 13, and referred to the Committee on Planning and Development.

Report on Docket No. 1059, order that the Committee on Planning and Development hold hearing on proposed boundary change amendment to Dudley Station/Roxbury Commercial Area Revitalization District plans (referred August 9) — recommending the order be placed on file and the following resolution be adopted.

The report was accepted; the order was placed on file.

APPROVING PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO DUDLEY STATION CARD PLAN AND SUBMITTING SAID PLAN TO SECRETARY OF COMMUNITIES AND DEVELOPMENT FOR APPROVAL

Couns. McCORMACK and BOLLING offered the following:

Whereas, In accordance with chapters 40D and 23B, Massachusetts General Laws, The Commonwealth of Massachusetts acting by and through the Secretary of Communities and Development may amend existing Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) plans; and

Whereas, Such approval is a precondition for the use of various state financial incentives for commercial development that would be in the interest of Boston residents; and

Whereas, The Dudley Station CARD already has been prepared to guide the redevelopment of the commercial area, is still operational, and satisfies the statutory CARD plan requirements; and

Whereas, The Parcel 18/Ruggles Center and P-3 development of the amended Dudley Station CARD, the boundaries of which are described on pages 2 and 3 of the amended Dudley Station CARD plan, would forward the community development objectives of the City of Boston and would result in both the physical redevelopment of said District and the creation of employment opportunities consistent with the above stated statutes; and

Whereas, The amended Dudley Station CARD is in a predominately commercial geographic area and implementation of the proposed CARD amendment will serve to prevent the decay of the area and will help deter the movement of commercial enterprises into previously non-commercial areas; and

Whereas, The City Council's Committee on Planning and Development conducted a public hearing on the proposed amendment to the Dudley Station CARD and found overwhelming support for the amendment; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Boston City Council, in meeting assembled, does hereby approve the proposed amendment to the Dudley Station Commercial Area Revitalization District plan and submits said plan to the Secretary of Communities and Development for approval.

The resolution was adopted under suspension of the rules.

ORDINANCE RE LINKED DEPOSIT BANKING

Couns. SCONDRAS, SALERNO and BOLLING offered the following:

City of Boston

In the Year Nineteen Hundred and Eighty-nine.

An Ordinance Linked Deposit Banking Ordinance.

Be it ordained by the City Council of Boston, as follows: Legislative policy and findings. It is declared and found that:

Whereas, The city invests approximately $400 million of its funds in Boston financial institutions and the Retirement Board invests $600 million in pension funds; and

Whereas, The City of Boston encourages those institutions in which it invests to invest in Boston, especially in ways that create affordable housing and promote economic development; and

Whereas, Lending practices can be formulated on the basis of legitimate, demonstrable economic criteria that are supportive of the economic growth and stability of the City of Boston and positively impact on the quality of life within the City; and

Whereas, Those lending practices that constitute arbitrary denials of financing based on geographic location, racial, religious, gender, sexual orientation or ethnic considerations, low-or-moderate income or any consideration not justified on the basis of legitimate, demonstrable economic criteria are inimical to the public health, safety, and welfare, stifling to the economic mobility of Boston residents and antithetical to the express public policy of the City of Boston as articulated in the Boston Human Rights Ordinance; and

Whereas, Those arbitrarily inappropriate lending practices hasten and foster the instability and decay of city neighborhoods, especially minority neighborhoods, destabilize the business and economic environment of the city and drive prospective urban home buyers and commercial institutions into other communities where better credit terms are available, thereby reducing and adversely affecting the city's property tax base and business climate and prevent neighborhoods from developing and reaching their economic potential; and

Whereas, The drive to eliminate redlining, the practice of systematically denying credit on the basis of geographic location of the borrower or collateral securing the potential loan, began more than 25 years ago; and

Whereas, While the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 requires that financial institutions meet the credit needs of the communities in which they are located, evidence suggests the practice of redlining unfortunately continues to persist; and

Whereas, A report issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston suggested that minority neighborhoods receive a disproportionate amount of loans compared to other city neighborhoods and additionally that there is a racial pattern of lending by area financial institutions; and

Whereas, It is the intention of the City of Boston to stimulate the development of low and moderate cost housing throughout the city, development of business, and extension of banking and credit services to all residents through an incentive program wherein financial institutions that show a strong commitment to the economic development of all neighborhoods of the city are rewarded with the deposit of city funds; and

Whereas, It is the further intention of the City of Boston to end redlining and discriminatory financial practices; and

Whereas, Municipal government should therefore conduct business only with those financial institutions who are responsible in servicing the needs of all of Boston's communities and are responsive to the maintenance of a healthy and stable economic climate throughout the city; and

Whereas, A requirement that financial institutions disclose certain lending data, establish financial products enabling funds to be reinvested within the city, address the special needs of communities that have had less access to credit and banking services, and make certain pledges as a condition of becoming a depository of city monies is a necessary, desirable, practical and fiscally prudent measure to protect the stability of city neighborhoods and the property values of city inhabitants; therefore be it

Ordained, By the City Council of Boston, in accordance with the provisions of Massachusetts General Laws chapter 43B, section 13, and any other applicable law, as follows:

Any financial institution seeking to be qualified as a depository for the City of Boston, after providing any and all disclosure and or information pursuant to section 3 of this Ordinance, shall sign a pledge agreement as set forth in section 5 of this ordinance. A "(D) Substantial noncompliance in meeting community credit needs" rating pursuant to the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et. seq.) shall constitute prima facie evidence of disqualification as a city depository for the year following the issuance of the rating. The Commission, may, in its discretion, qualify a "(D)" rated institution if and only if said institution can demonstrate by clear and compelling evidence that it received such a rating as the result of gross error or mistake. This Request for Proposals (RFP) has been prepared to allow City depositories to respond to both the financial services required by the City of Boston and to community banking services and investment needs, particularly in neighborhoods that are now under served in terms of lending activity and in neighborhoods where there is particular need for low and moderate income housing.

In consideration for acceptance as a depository of City of Boston funds, the undersigned institution will commit the following financial services and lending goals to the City of Boston, City of Boston residents, and properties within the City of Boston on an annual basis.

Part A. Required City Financial Services.

The Collector-Treasurer of the City of Boston has determined that the following are the financial services necessary to the City of Boston:

(TO BE FILLED IN)

Part B. Community Service Commitments.

1. Please attach a listing of your current Automatic Teller Machine (ATM) locations and indicate the hours of their availability to the general public.

a. The City of Boston would like to see the placement of ATMs in existing municipal buildings. What would be your proposal for placement of ATMs in municipal buildings?

b. The Commission has determined that several Boston neighborhoods (see attached list) are presently not provided ATM and/or branch service or are under served based on a population to machine/branch ratio. For areas not presently served by ATMs and/or branches of your bank or under served based on population, are you willing to put additional ATMs into service and extend branch services?

2. Please state what your present policy is regarding the cashing of checks.

Boston residents who presently do not have bank accounts experience difficulty in cashing government checks. For non-account holders, what would be your proposal for providing this service? Specifically what alternate forms of identification would you be willing to accept?

Would you issue a bank check cashing courtesy card (similar to those issued by major supermarkets)?

Would you extend banking hours in neighborhood banks on days when government checks are issued?

Part C. Community Investment Commitments.

The City of Boston has adopted a policy to establish programs to prevent further deterioration of existing housing stock and to support programs to promote housing availability for low and moderate income residents of the City of Boston. In furtherance of these programs, the City of Boston seeks to develop programs with financial institutions serving as depositories of City funds to meet these needs.

I. Lending Goals: Please indicate a dollar commitment for the following loan types for the coming year:

1. a) Residential Mortgages (Boston Properties)

b) Home Improvement Loans (Boston Properties)

c) Commercial Loans (Boston properties) excluding Central Business District

2. Please provide a dollar commitment for loans for the coming year which support development of low and moderate income housing that include limits on the rate at which equity increases, including restrictions, ground lease restrictions, and other similar mechanisms.

3. How much will you commit for the coming year to support Boston based Community Development corporations in terms of both contributions for operating budgets and loan commitments?

4. How much will you commit in terms of contributions for operating budgets and loan commitments for the coming year to support an organization which has significant community development corporation representation on its governing board and assists community development corporations and programs by lending funds for low and moderate income housing development?

5. Please indicate a dollar commitment to a Special Loan Pool for qualified low-moderate income buyers first-time of Boston properties subject to section II lending criteria.

II. Loan Criteria for Special Loan Pool.

The reason for creating a special loan pool is to enable qualified first time, low/moderate home buyers, wishing to purchase one-to four family properties in Boston, to compete successfully in the mortgage market. In order that as many as possible of these potential first time home buyers qualify within sound underwriting principles, more flexible loan criteria will be necessary. Please indicate below in the categories what criteria you will adhere to for underwriting mortgages from this special loan pool. In some of the following categories, the minimum desired criteria have been cited, but since criteria will be evaluated as a total package, please indicate what your institution is prepared to adhere to in each category.

a. At what interest rate will you loan funds from the special loan pool? Please indicate the interest rate for adjustable mortgages and fixed mortgages in terms of percentages points above the cost of the money you borrow. e.g. prime rate, treasury bonds, etc.

b. Will you charge any origination/fee points? We suggest these points should be waived.

c. Please indicate the maximum loan-to-value ratio allowed. We suggest 95 percent, to necessitate no more than a 5 percent downpayment.

d. In order to reduce closing costs, we recognize that some costs are pass-through charges and beyond the bank's control. Other closing costs such as rate lock-in fees, attorney's fees and application fees are subject to the bank's influence. We would like to see these fees reduced to their minimum. Please indicate what your fees will be in each of these three categories.

1. Rate lock-in fee _____
2. Bank attorney's fee _____
3. Bank application fee _____

e. What will be the maximum debt ratio for borrower income to the housing debt and to the borrower's total debt? We recommend the maximum to be 45 percent for the housing debt ratio and 50 percent for the total debt ratio.

f. How much will you require at time of purchase to be held in escrow on each mortgage to cover taxes and insurance? We suggest that no more than one-twelfth of the total annual payment be required.

g. Will you charge any closing costs for an automatic conversion from a variable rate loan to a conventional rate loan if the borrower requests it? We feel that the charge should be limited to the recording fee only.

h. Will you permit a second mortgage on a property to finance necessary home improvements? We think there should be no prohibition against this additional borrowing.

i. Will you look to non-traditional criteria as a substantial record for judging creditworthiness? If so, will you consider the following as indicative of creditworthiness such as rent payment history, utility payment history or other indicators that provide a substantial record for judging creditworthiness? Please state what non-traditional criteria you will consider and how you will apply such criteria.

In addition to the above loan criteria, several other factors effect the ability of first time, low-moderate-income home buyers to successfully obtain a mortgage. Please comment on what your institution is prepared to do in each of the following categories.

a. What kind of special financial counseling service will you establish to assist first-time home buyers and/or present borrowers in danger of default?

b. What will be your affirmative marketing strategy to make known the availability of mortgage funds under this special loan pool from your bank?

c. Realtors frequently assert that appraisers of Boston properties under-value these properties because they utilize appraisal standards from the suburbs. This results in an inability to borrow a sufficient amount to meet the purchase price set by the market. How will your institution address this problem and will your bank use Boston-based appraisers or issue special instructions for appraisal of Boston properties?

d. Realtors similarly assert that banks sometimes insist on extensive repairs to a property before a sale can be consummated. These conditions sometimes prevent a sale from occurring. What provision will you make to prevent artificial barriers from obstructing the sale of Boston properties?

Individual scores shall be given for all subsections of section 7. Part D and shall be done in a manner consistent with the Uniform Inter-Agency Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) Assessment Rating System. Scoring of HMDA related data provided pursuant to section 3 shall be done in a manner consistent with that of the rating system used by evaluating agencies referenced by the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (12 U.S.C. 2901 et. seq.).

Section 9. Allocation.

MAYOR TO FILE FOR HEARING BEFORE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION RE NYNEX STRIKE

Coun. SCONDRAS offered the following:

Whereas, The New England Telephone Company has been granted a monopoly over local telephone service in the City of Boston pursuant to the public trust afforded its operation as a public utility to provide a necessary and vital function to the citizens and City of Boston; and

Whereas, The policies of the management of the New England Telephone Company and its parent corporation, NYNEX, resulted in a strike by the employees of that company beginning on July 5, 1989; and

Whereas, The workers' dispute with the New England Telephone Company and NYNEX relates to proposals to dramatically shift the cost of health care coverage to union employees, most adversely affecting the lowest paid workers, who can ill afford it; and

Whereas, The City of Boston, which considers adequate health care to all employees of prime importance, wishes to see its telephone dollars continue supporting workers' health care; and

Whereas, The City of Boston recognizes that the escalating cost of medical care is a crisis impacting all people, businesses, and institutions, and the City believes that the solution is in a broader policy, not one that simply reduces medical care or shifts its cost to the lowest paid; and

Whereas, The City of Boston has been made aware that NYNEX Corporation earned a record $1.3 billion in profits in 1988 due to the hard work of its employees; and

Whereas, The City of Boston has previously expressed its support for the striking unions. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (I.B.E.W.) and the Communication Workers of America (C.W.A.) and called for the New England Telephone Company and NYNEX to bargain face to face and in good faith with its striking employees to negotiate a fair and just contract with its non-management employees; and

Whereas, The policies of the management of the New England Telephone Company and NYNEX have resulted in the perpetuation of said strike, now into its tenth week, making NYNEX the only regional telephone company in the nation that has failed to reach an agreement with its employees; and

Whereas, The failure on the part of the management of the New England Telephone Company and NYNEX to successfully negotiate a satisfactory agreement with the striking employees has resulted in a serious decline and lapse in telephone service to the City of Boston and its residents including, but not limited to outrageous delays in installation and repair and in reaching operators and directory assistance; and

Whereas, The City of Boston relies heavily on telephone and directory service in carrying out its necessary and important municipal and governmental functions; and

Whereas, The result of the New England Telephone Company's failure to negotiate a fair and just contract with its non-management employees, rendering said company unable to adequately provide service to the citizens of Boston and limiting its capacity to install and repair equipment and telephone lines, has been that numerous Boston residents have been left without telephone service; and

Whereas, The New England Telephone Company's limited capacity to provide service imperils the health, safety and welfare of the citizens of Boston as it untenably infringes upon the public's access to fire and police services, hospitals, medical care, government, and social service and places handicapped, infirmed, and elderly residents of Boston in particular danger; and

Whereas, The rates and tariffs of the New England Telephone Company, as determined by the Public Services Commission, are based on the provision by the New England Telephone of full and adequate telephone services; and

Whereas, It is the policy of the City of Boston to pay for only those services for which it receives: now therefore be it

Ordered, That his Honor, the Mayor, be, and hereby is, directed to file for a hearing before the Public Service Commission and to determine the actual fair market value of the decimated telephone service that the City of Boston has received and continues to receive, since the beginning of the strike; and be it further Ordered, That his Honor, the Mayor, be, and hereby is directed to withhold all payments of the City of Boston to the New England Telephone Company, and any parent or subsidiary corporation thereof, until such time, and only such time as the New England Telephone has negotiated a settlement of its dispute with the striking employees in good faith, restored telephone service to an acceptable level of service and the Public Service Commission has made a determination as to the actual amount owed by the City to the New England Telephone Company.

Referred to the Committee on Government Operations.

BPL'S ED PELTIER PLAYS IMPORTANT ROLE IN BOSTON'S FILM SCENE

By Daniel Sterne

"I'd love to run a movie palace," says the man who has run the audiovisual program at the Boston Public Library for the past 38 years. He is Euclid (Ed) Peltier, supervisor of audiovisual services, and he knows his films like old friends know their baseball cards. He even had his own toy movie projector, which he used to crank by hand, when he was a youngster in Worcester.

The movie projectors that he works with today are automated and he has more than 12,000 film titles in the BPL's current inventory under his control. Founded by Peltier in 1952, the Audiovisual Department serves a varied population of groups and individuals of all ages and ethnic origins. The Department distributes 16mm films to Boston's 25 neighborhood branch libraries, 200 cities and towns throughout the Commonwealth, and to 6,000 registered organizations located within the Eastern Massachusetts Regional Library System.

The BPL plays an important role in presenting critically acclaimed films that are not necessarily commercial blockbusters, according to veteran film critic Nat Segaloff, secretary-treasurer of the Boston Society of Film Critics, which has given the BPL several awards over the years for its film programming. "Ed's efforts in offering public film series, unearthing hard-to-find treasures, and providing important local premieres for little-seen works is a vastly essential effort," says Segaloff.

Film critic Michael Blowen of the Boston Globe adds, "Ed Peltier has become one of Boston's most important protectors of film art." According to Blowen, the BPL fills the artistic vacuum created when more and more Boston cinemas become dedicated to first-run commercial films at the expense of art films. Ed's regular film retrospectives, such as the recent tributes to Sir Laurence Olivier, Bette Davis, and Barbara Stanwyck, have made the Boston Public Library one of the most significant theatres for serious film in the country.

"The need for action in today's films is intense," according to Ed. "Audiences are impatient and are accustomed to sixty-second commercial breaks." He prefers films that demand attention from the viewer, which is why he often schedules documentaries such as the "Making of 'Do The Right Thing'," which he recently screened in the Central Library's Rabb Lecture Hall. He also favors the classics and admires such directors as John Ford, Jean Renoir, Orson Welles, and John Sayles.

Peltier earned both a bachelor's and a master's degrees in communication arts from the College of Communication at Boston University and a master's degree in library sciences from the University of Rhode Island. He had lectured on film at several colleges throughout New England, including Clark, Worcester State, the University of Rhode Island, Northeastern, Framingham State, and Simmons. Born in Worcester, Mass., he lived most of his adult life in Wellesley, and recently moved near the BPL in the Back Bay.

His love for movies has remained constant over the years and he still gets a kick out of watching audience reaction to classic films. "The great ones endure," he concludes . . . which can also be said for Ed Peltier.

Daniel Sterne is a student at the University of Massachusetts/Boston and a communication intern at the Boston Public Library.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN PORTRAIT STOLEN FROM THE BPL

The Boston Public Library acknowledged the theft on Friday, April 13th of a valuable painting of Benjamin Franklin, from the Cheverus Room of the Research Library in Copley Square. Library sources have placed its value in the vicinity of $50,000.

The painting, known as the "Fur Collar," is believed to be an early copy of a famous work by French artist Joseph Siffred Duplessis (1725-1802) done in 1778. Originally owned by Adrien Jarry de Mancy (1796-1862), a professor of history at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, it was subsequently purchased by Edward Brooks and presented to the City of Boston in 1858 "to be deposited in the library."

The painting is an oil on canvas, oval, 27" x 23 3/4" in which Franklin has a red coat with collar of light brown fur. The background is greenish gray and signed at right "J.S. Duplessis/pinx. paris/1778."

The Boston Police and the FBI are currently investigating. Anyone with any information regarding the theft or current disposition of the Franklin painting is asked to contact the Boston Police Department or the Boston Public Library at 617/536-5400, Ext. 366.

CITY SPONSORS TRANSIT TOPICS NEIGHBORHOOD MEETINGS

... a continuing effort to give local
... dents a greater voice in public
... sportation service planning deci... sions, the Boston Transportation De-
... tment will sponsor five TransitTo-
... '90 meetings this May in Hyde
... ck, West Roxbury/Roslindale, Ja-
... ca Plain, Roxbury, and Dorches-
... The meetings will focus on day-
... ay experiences with local transit

... including bus routes, service reliabil-
... ity, public safety, and station mainte... nance.

... "Many Boston residents depend on ... public transportation every day of the ... week — for access to jobs, school,
... family and friends," said Mayor
... Raymond L. Flynn. "The City of
... Boston pays close to $50 million
... each year for MBTA service, and we ... have a responsibility to ensure that
... our residents receive the best possi-

... is especially important during these

... "Residents frequently forward
... comments, complaints and sugges... tions about transit service to the
... Transportation Department," said
... Transportation Commissioner Ri... chard A. Dimino. "TransitTopics al... lows us to work with neighborhood
... residents to identify specific prob-

... for appropriate MBTA service im... provements."

... The BTB has met with residents
... of 16 neighborhoods in the last two ... years to identify their concerns about
... bus routes, customer service, passen... ger safety, and similar issues. "As a ... result of these meeting," said
... Dimino, "A number of transit serv... ice improvements have been realized
... since the program began in 1988."
... Some of these improvements include:

- Bus route 31, which provides a di... rect connection between Mattapan
... Square and Forest Hills
- Pilot signage program, which will ... include detailed schedule and route
... information at bus stops.
- Passenger survey on bus route 55
... to identify potential improvements
... on this route serving the Fenway
... area, Back Bay, and downtown
... Boston.
- Bus shelters added, repaired, or ... removed at key locations in ac... cordance with specific recommen... dations.

... "This program is most helpful in ... identifying our riders' concerns,"
... noted MBTA General Manager
... Thomas P. Glynn.

... "We are very pleased that the

... MBTA has implemented some of the ... suggestions that neighborhood resi... dents offered at our workshops," said
... Commissioner Dimino. "We are op-

... viders by the changed personality
... and sometimes unpredictable actions
... of the patient. The need for in... creased care can strain family fi... nances as well.

EARLY SYMPTOMS

... Though clinicians have yet to pin-
... point the exact cause, AD's symp... toms may differ in each individual
... and vary from day to day. A person
... with AD often feels a mixture of ... emotions which may include confu... sion, frustration, anger, fear, uncer... tainty and grief or depression. Other
... early signs of AD may include:

- forgetfulness
- shortened attention span
- trouble with simple math
- difficulty in expressing thoughts
- changing or unpredictable moods
- less desire to try new things or
... meet new people

... As AD progresses, the above cited
... symptoms become more intense:

—severe loss of memory; inability to get dressed; family names; how to eat

—mood and personality changes; outbursts of anger

—total loss of judgment and concentration

—inability to maintain personal hygiene and complete simple tasks

AD CAN MIMIC OTHER DISORDERS

Many of these symptoms can be caused by other conditions. It is necessary therefore, to rule out other possibilities by having the person complete a physical exam, including neurological and psychiatric testing.

AD is a degenerative condition — it will not get better and there is no known cure or prevention. Physicians have found, however, that a combination of some drugs, exercise and proper diet can help alleviate or reduce patient anxieties and keep patient resistance high.

HOW FAMILIES CAN AID AD SUFFERERS

You can best help yourself and the person by taking positive action. In the early stages of AD, many families and patients benefit from professional counseling or psychotherapy. Therapists can help allay fears and confusion that are attributed to AD.

Family members can help AD sufferers stay alert by involving them in daily activities. Physical activity, integration into social groups, simple household tasks and recreational events, like visits to the zoo, or store are all ideas that can make the difference in the person's safety, comfort and continued involvement in day to day living.

Family members can also make life easier for AD patients by providing memory aids. Some ideas include:

—calendars that display date, day of week and appointments

—large labels on commonly used items

—safety instructions (“Turn off stove”, etc.)

—written reminders for forgotten tasks (“Take out garbage”)

—lists to help keep things in order (things to do before going to bed)

—directions to help find or use everyday items

In latter stages, it is important to concentrate on safety precautions such as putting medicines away, locking up poisons and disconnecting appliances that could unwittingly be left on.

HELPING THE CAREGIVERS

Family members caring for an AD patient can easily find this job exhausting, confusing and frustrating. Many times feelings of guilt, fear, embarrassment and anger and resentment are just a few of the caregivers mixed emotions. It is imperative that caregivers get the help that they need.

—seek professional help if necessary — sometimes professionals can help with the hard decisions — including the possibility of a nursing home for AD patients

—staying healthy by eating, resting and exercising properly

—ask for help from friends or other family members

—learn as much as much as possible; sometimes knowing what to expect can cut down on anxieties

—ask questions of doctors, social workers or counselors; the patient and or caregiver may be eligible for additional support

—join a support group; the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association (ADRDA) has chapters around the country. They can be reached at 1-800-621-0379 for more information.

THE VISITING NURSE ASSOCIATION OF BOSTON IS THE OLDEST AND SECOND LARGEST PROVIDER OF HOME HEALTH CARE IN THE NATION. NEARLY 600 PROFESSIONAL NURSES AND HOME HEALTH AIDES MAKE OVER 500,000 HOME CARE VISITS ANNUALLY. FOR ADDITIONAL INFORMATION, PLEASE CALL (617) 426-6630.

ORDER TO PLACE NONBINDING PUBLIC ADVISORY QUESTION ON CITY ELECTION BALLOT RE REORGANIZATION OF SCHOOL COMMITTEE

The following was received:

City of Boston
Office of the Mayor

October 3, 1989.

To the City Council.

Dear Councillors:

I transmit herewith for your approval a referendum question to be placed on the November 7th ballot.

I seek your support for this simplified question so that we are able to refocus public debate on school reform. Over the past several days, I have spoken with voters throughout the city. Despite our good intentions, the three option question has confused rather than clarified the important issue of school governance. From the outset, I have sought an informed consideration of the appointed board concept. Boston deserves a focused debate on the merits of the proposal. I have discussed this situation with members of the City Council as well as community leaders and have been urged to propose the change necessary to clarify the question. I am confident that the referendum question I am submitting today will accomplish this important objective.

In addition, the opposition to an appointed board has not embraced either Option B or Option C. Instead, flyers and slogans urging voters to vote "No on Question 2" have proliferated. Those opposed to the appointed board have further confused the voting public by advocating a choice which does not exist in the previous draft.

I believe that significant reform of the Boston Public Schools will not happen without a major change in school governance. I believe that the proposal I seek to place before the voters will allow for a clean break with the failed decision making structure which plagues the school reform effort.

Even though a referendum vote is not required for a change in school governance, I consistently have stated that change should not go forward without the clear support of the electorate. For this reason, we must approve a referendum question which gives the voters a clear opportunity to accept or reject this proposed change on its educational merits. I respectfully urge your support in placing this referendum question on the ballot.

Sincerely,

Raymond L. Flynn,
Mayor of Boston.

Ordered, In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws, chapter 53, section 18A, the following nonbinding public opinion advisory question shall be placed on the official ballot to be used at several polling places at the city election next:

Should the elected school committee structure be changed to a new seven member school board serving four year terms, appointed by the Mayor with the approval of the City Council from a list of Boston residents selected by a nominating panel comprised of community leaders, parents, educators, business and labor leaders; provided that within eight years after any such change is enacted, voters shall be given the opportunity to evaluate the new governance structure?

On motion of Coun. McCORMACK, the order was passed under suspension of the rules, yeas 11, nays 2:

NO. 20

FIVE STREET CLOCKS

3.0 SIGNIFICANCE OF THE PROPERTY

3.1 Historic Significance:

The manufacturing of clocks was one of the earliest and most important of American industries. Before 1800, clockmaking was an individual effort; each clockmaker constructed a few clocks with hand tools and no two were exactly alike. Between 1800-60, machine methods were introduced and a number of clock productions occurred solely in the factories. The industry was controlled by a small number of firms and their line greatly increased.

The post clocks studied in this report were manufactured by the E. Howard Clock Co. of Boston. Although other factories had a higher level of production, the Howard name became associated with fine quality and craftsmanship, especially in the manufacturing of watches. The company, existing today under the name of Howard Clock Products, Inc., still manufactures a limited number of their classic clock models although post clocks are no longer made. Production now focuses on clock and watch components as well as parts for aircrafts and electrical instruments.

The founder of the company, Edward Howard, was born in Hingham, Massachusetts in 1813. At age 16, he became an apprentice to Aaron Willard, Jr., whose family was well known in the clockmaking trade. While working for Willard, Howard met another apprentice, David P. Davis, and in 1842 the two of them went into business with a third man, Luther Stephenson in 1847. They operated together until their company bankrupted in 1857.

Howard and Davis' business produced a line of house, office, bank and tower clocks with weight-driven movements in the traditional Willard pattern. They also made regulators and clocks for railroads and jewelers, as well as scales for banks and balances for druggists. In the late 1840's, Howard and a friend, Aaron Dennison, became interested in producing watches using factory methods, automatic machinery and interchangeable parts. Prior to this time, no two watches were alike and making parts for repair occurred on a trial and error basis. In 1850, Howard, Dennison and Davis backed by Samuel Curtis, established, in Roxbury the first watch factory in America. The venture was unsuccessful for several reasons. A great deal of time and money was invested in experimentation involving an eight-day watch. It proved to be an unreliable timekeeper and the firm had to change to a thirty-six hour model. Space constraints required the partners to move their factory to Waltham in 1854. The new building, and the tooling it required, posed a financial hardship. The panic of 1857 finally forced the sale of the watch factory to Royal E. Robbins and the business evolved into the Waltham Watch Company. Howard, Dennison and Davis parted company.

In 1859 Howard re-entered the business world. At his firm of E. Howard & Co. on 17 Washington Street in Roxbury, Howard manufactured clocks and a line of watches more suited to his taste than produced in Waltham. The firm changed its name to the Howard Clock and Watch Company in 1861 and later, in 1881, to the E. Howard Watch and Clock Company. Howard retired the following year. Since the early 1860's all Howard clocks have carried the trademark "E. Howard and Co., Boston" including most of the cast iron street clocks in this study.

In 1903, the Keystone Watch Case Co. acquired the right to use the Howard name on its watches and moved the watch division of the company to Waltham. The E. Howard Clock Company and the E. Howard Watch Company operated separately until the early 1930's when they were combined at the Waltham plant. In 1934 the company acquired its current name, Howard Clock Products, Inc. and has operated in Waltham ever since.

The Howard Company first manufactured street clocks on a regular basis in the 1960's although some models had been introduced a few years earlier. One of the first in Boston stood on Brattle Street; its base and post are exactly like the one still standing today. The head is a slight variation of the clock now located in East Boston.

The movements of the Howard Clocks were located in their bases and were originally weight-driven. The weight on each clock was attached to a wire rope which wound around a drum at the top of the base. The force of the weight, pulling on the rope, powered the gears of the mechanism. A shaft running up the post of the clock connected the mechanism. A shaft running up the post of the clock connected the mechanism to the gears which turn behind the hands. The weight-driven mechanism has been replaced by an electric motor in all the clocks currently working.

Street clocks were first erected prior to the time inexpensive pocket watches were available to the general populace. Street clocks were not only important as timekeepers, they often served as advertisements for the businesses that erected them in front of their stores. For example, the clock at 439 Boylston Street originally stood in front of the Clapp & Sons pharmacy and had a crown bearing that name.

3.2 Architectural Significance

In addition to their significance as forms of advertisement or as products of a well-known clock manufacturer, these clocks are important examples of both 19th and early 20th century street furniture and cast iron workmanship. The clocks, often placed in areas of commercial prominence or nature, were meant to be showpieces and attention getters. Although the Howard Company produced many street clocks, they have become increasingly rare due to vandalism, lack of maintenance and accidents. As well as being historical timepieces, the clocks standing illustrate the more human sized scale of the past. When paired and maintained, they serve the same purpose as they did one hundred years ago.

3.3 Relationship to the Criteria for Landmarks Designation:

The post clocks nominated for Landmark status meets the criteria for designation as landmarks as established in Section 4, Chapter 21B of the Acts of 1975, in that they are objects that:

1.) are representative of the evolution of architectural craftsmanship and embody distinctive characteristics of a type inherently valuable for the study of a period.

2.) are notable for their cast iron craftsmanship, the high quality of their mechanisms and the care devoted to their design. In addition, the Howard Company, although had a national reputation. The clocks are also significant as a form of street furniture and represent a part of history before watches were commonly worn. They were effective advertising devices and at one time stood as a common but now disappearing part of the urban landscape.

PLANNING CONTEXT

1. Background:

The clocks stand in their original locations, with two exceptions: the clock in East Boston which originally stood in Scollay Square, and the Faneuil Hall clock imported from Pennsylvania.

According to the Boston Redevelopment Authority, the clock at the corner of Huntington and Massachusetts Avenues has always been located at this site. The clock was stored in storage during the construction of Symphony Towers and was reinstalled upon completion of the project. Seven of the eight streetclocks were erected by private parties.

The City of Boston was responsible for erecting only one clock — at Peabody Square — and later assumed ownership of the clock at 333 Massachusetts Avenue. In 1896, City Council voted to name the square in honor of Colonel Oliver Peabody, founder of Kidder and Peabody and Company and benefactor of All Saints, the Episcopal church removed from the square. Peabody had donated the square for the protection of the church. The clock was added to his land in 1909.

Before a clock is erected on a sidewalk which is City property a permit must be issued. Only two clocks are located on sidewalks owned by the City — at 342 West Broadway and 696 Centre Street. Fees accompanying the permits have been paid by Paul Sharkin, owner of the Clock Tavern, and the Boston Five Cents Saving Bank. All other Howard clocks are set back a minimum of ten feet from the street, thus a permit of ownership is required. The Faneuil Hall clock is located on property leased by the Rouse Company for ninety-nine years.

5.2 Current Planning Issues:

The Boston Art Commission is currently working towards restoring the two broken clocks at 342 West Broadway, and Peabody Square. The projects will be paid for by the Edmund Ingersoll Browne Fund, whose annual income is applied to the adornment and benefit of Boston "by the erection of statues, monuments, fountains . . . and for the ornament of its streets, ways, squares, parks in such a manner as will promote the pleasure, comfort, education, patriotism and good taste of its citizens."

West Broadway is one of the nine areas targeted for public improvements by the NDEA. The plan, devised by the Urban Design Division, calls for new sidewalks, light fixtures, trees, trash receptacles, benches, a kiosk and the restoration of the Howard clock.

The remaining six clocks are not in need of repair and are being maintained.

CITY OF BOSTON HEALTH AND SAFETY POLICY

Purpose of Policy:

The purpose of this policy is to reaffirm the commitment of the City of Boston to promote a safe and healthy workplace. The Citywide Labor-Management Task Force will work aggressively with all City departments and departmental health and safety committees to identify and eliminate workplace hazards to promote healthful working conditions. Existing federal, state and local law regarding health and safety will be viewed as a baseline for City efforts. In addition, individual departments shall develop health and safety programs which include compliance with the Massachusetts Right to Know Law and implementation of other appropriate safety training criteria and procedures.

No employee shall face discrimination or retribution for bringing health and safety issues to the attention of his/her department safety representative, or safety committee.

Safety and Health Representatives:

Each department head shall identify a health and safety representative who will work with the department's health and safety committee and the Office of Personnel Management on a variety of issues such as Right to Know compliance, safety training, and other initiatives aimed at improving workplace safety and health.

Compliance with the Massachusetts Right to Know Law:

The Office of Personnel Management (OPM) shall ensure that new City employees receive information and training about their rights under the Massachusetts Right to Know Law within 30 days of employment. OPM shall draw upon the expertise of other departments such as the Fire Department and the Department of Health & Hospitals to provide training to the departmental safety and health representatives. This will enable these representatives to train employees in their respective departments and comply with the provisions of the Right to Know Law including:

- The posting of Right to Know Notices,
- Written definitions/procedures which are clearly communicated for:
 - Essential Services/Job Classifications;
 - Proper handling of regulated substances;
 - Requests/response to requests for Material Safety Data Sheets (MSDS's);

- Documentation will be kept on file in each department of all hazardous substances that are currently used in the department, as well as, any hazardous substances which have been found and/or used and removed.

(Please Note: While OPM will provide resource and assistance to City departments, the ultimate responsibility for compliance with Right to Know Law is with each department head.)

Toxics Reduction:

The Administration and every department will make a concerted effort to minimize the use of hazardous materials in the workplace. Contracts and purchases involving the use of pesticides, herbicides, cleaners, solvents, and other chemicals shall be reviewed and assessed. Whenever possible the use of such materials will be reduced and/or substituted with less/non-toxic alternatives. Integrated Pest Management and other practices to reduce/eliminate exposure to chemicals/toxic materials will be promoted.

Citywide Labor-Management Task Force

Under the auspices of the Boston Labor-Management Cooperation Program, the Citywide Task Force, as one of their first initiatives, shall bring together union and management representatives to coordinate health and safety programs for the City of Boston. The Task Force shall work closely with administration representatives, union representatives and departmental health and safety committees to accomplish the following goals:

- Assist in the development and implementation of a written Health and Safety Policy for the City of Boston;
- Identification of, and support for, health and safety representatives within each City department;
- Identification and provision of resources to assist workplace health and safety programs;
- Support the effective functioning of the collective bargaining health and safety committees;
- Oversight and coordination of the citywide effort to improve safety and health in the workplace;
- Monitoring and evaluation of efforts to promote workplace health and safety, and report annually to the Mayor on the progress of these efforts.

Boston Massacre Site

At this site, on March 5, 1770, a British guard of nine soldiers clashed with an unruly mob, resulting in the death of five colonists — including Crispus Attucks, an early black patriot.

NO. 21

THE BOSTON HARBOR PROJECT TUNNELS

It is the spring of 1992, just past dawn in the home of Bob Jones, a construction worker from Metropolitan Boston's South Shore. Jones, a "dhog" who makes his living digging tunnels, finishes breakfast and has his lunch. Jones drives a short way to Quincy's Squantum Point sec- where he catches the ferry that will transport construction workers on the morning shift to Deer Island in Boston harbor, the site of the nation's largest wastewater treatment plant.

The 20-minute ride is a beautiful one this cool morning. The workers have no time leaving the ferry and go directly to the changing area to get helmets, belts, goggles, work clothing and other protective gear. A platform at the face of the tunnel shaft, which is 30 feet in diameter and 400 feet below the surface of the island. The morning shift workers wait their turns to descend to the face of the tunnel. There, the night shift is leaving the job in small groups, hauled up from the tunnel chamber in a construction elevator.

A short time later, Jones reaches the floor of the shaft and boards a small train which serves as a person-carrier. In another 10 minutes, Jones reaches the site of today's work, one-half mile into the tunnel and about 300 feet below sea level. Jones enters the rear of the tunnel boring machine (TBM) where he monitors the control panel for removal problems as the TBM cuts through the face of the bedrock.

For the next six hours, Jones and his shift operate the 2400 horsepower machine at the rock's face, cutting through the rock and turning it into a pile of rubble that will fall on to a conveyor belt and be collected in the TBM's chamber for hoisting to the surface of Deer Island. Although the temperature is a cool 55 degrees, the work is hot and humid: the humidity is nearly always 100 percent and the heat generated by the equipment — drilling, lighting, ventilation, and transportation — drives the temperature into the 80s. For Bob Jones, coping with these conditions in stride is part of working another day of construction on the eight to ten mile effluent outfall tunnel under the ocean floor that, when completed, will be the longest tunnel of its kind in the world.

This is a snapshot of the tunnel construction that will take place between 1991 and 1995 as the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) begins construction of two hard-rock tunnels beneath the sea floor as part of the $6.1 billion Boston Harbor Project. The Authority's two undersea tunnels are part of the biggest public works project ever undertaken in New England.

The MWRA is building a new primary and secondary wastewater treatment plant to treat an average of some 500 million gallons of sewage a day that now pour into Boston Harbor after receiving only primary treatment. The new plant will replace the Authority's existing 21-year-old primary plant on Deer Island and a 38-year-old primary plant on Nut Island in Quincy. Through these plants the Authority provides sewer service to Boston and 42 other cities and towns in eastern Massachusetts.

The Authority has already halted the practices of dumping scum or floatable pollution into the harbor and by 1991 will have stopped the current practice of releasing sludge, the primary by-product of wastewater treatment, into the shallow waters of the harbor. Instead, the sludge will be converted into a soil conditioner to be used for landscaping or agriculture.

The longer of the two tunnels, the 24-foot diameter effluent outfall tunnel and diffuser, will extend about eight and one-half miles from the new treatment plant on Deer Island into Massachusetts Bay. There, at a carefully chosen site, treated wastewater will be released through a diffusion system composed of about eighty 26-inch diameter pipes rising vertically from the completed tunnel and through the sea floor. The second tunnel, the 11-foot diameter inter-island wastewater conveyance tunnel, will be bored from Deer Island to Nut Island in Quincy, a distance of about five miles. The exiting Nut Island primary treatment plant will be retired, and the new tunnel will convey wastewater from the Authority's southern collection system to the new Deer Island plant.

A large and experienced team has already begun to plan the details of these undersea tunnels. Larry Williamson, a senior design manager with the Authority's Program Management Division, is responsible for geotechnical and tunneling issues for the Boston Harbor Project. Together with Kaiser Engineers, the Authority's Program/Construction Manager, and Metcalf & Eddy, the Lead Design Engineer on the project, Williamson will oversee the contracts for detailed design of the tunnels. The effluent outfall tunnel and diffuser contract has been awarded to Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas, Inc. The inter-island wastewater conveyance tunnel contract was awarded to Sverdrup Corporation. These firms will serve as the project design engineers for the design and construction phases of each contract.

HOW TO DESIGN AND BUILD A TUNNEL

What is it like to plan and construct tunnels of such magnitude and importance? Thousands of details must be considered, ranging from the size, length, and alignment of the tunnels to the personal safety of the workers and the environmental soundness of the design elements. In this case, the Authority will be planning and constructing two tunnels simultaneously, both of which will be bored from Deer Island to their endpoints, while repairs and construction also proceed on the other Deer Island site facilities. Personnel and materials transport will take place by ferry and barge to avoid complete disruption of neighboring communities.

Starting Off: Analyzing the Rock

"There are three important elements in tunneling," says the MWRA's Williamson, "geology, water inflow, and the amount and type of support required in the tunnel." The Authority has already conducted extensive borings to gather information about the type of rock and soil located along the proposed alignments to depths of 500 feet below sea level. The tunnel planners must consider the relative hardness of the rock expected to be encountered, the consistency of the geology, and many other variables to determine the best tunnel alignments.

Water is a chronic presence in tunneling. Although both tunnels will be drilled through bedrock beneath the sea floor, water is likely to seep constantly into the tunnels and affect all aspects of the work. Tunnels are bored "uphill" so that the water flows from the drilling face downhill to the lowest end of the tunnel shaft, where it can be removed through large pumps.

Too much water is an obvious danger to the construction crew and equipment. David Stephens is an engineer with Mott McDonald, a civil engineering firm working on the English Channel tunnel as well as on the Authority's tunnels. Stephens suggests that the sump pumps designed for the tunnels' shaft chamber will be expected to handle 2,000 gallons of water per minute on a regular basis, with the capacity to handle 10 times that amount in an emergency. Hugh Caspe, Sverdrup Corporation's project manager for the inter-island tunnel, lists water infiltration as a key factor in the contractors' ability to proceed safely and on schedule.

Finally, water — in this case, seawater — invades the very air of the tunnel, making a damp and humid environment that must be ventilated to permit work to continue.

The third crucial element, the amount and type of support needed, is estimated by analysis of the rock samples retrieved from surface borings and reinforced by careful observation of the materials being excavated at the tunnel's face. Sometimes unsupported rock can stand alone. A variety of systems are available, however, to provide support where needed. Where the rock appears to be crumbling, a form of liquid concrete, called shotcrete, is sprayed in layers three to four inches thick over a wire mesh fixed to the tunnel walls. Steel ring beams can be used for support. Rock bolts, a form of tunneling "molly bolts," are also inserted in the tunnel walls to tie the rock formations together.

WEIGHING THE CHALLENGES

Designing tunnels to run beneath Boston Harbor bedrock presents some unusual challenges. In particular, the effluent outfall tunnel presents some intriguing problems for designers at Parsons Brinckerhoff Quade & Douglas.

Brian Van Weele, the Parsons project manager, lists several key issues that his design team is considering. First, the outfall will be the longest large-diameter tunnel in the world using only one entrance and exit: the construction shaft sunk from Deer Island. This means that all of the equipment, materials, workers, spoils, fresh air, electricity — everything — must come and go through one narrow entry. Close coordination plays a major role in the tunnel design.

The mechanics of moving people, equipment, and materials in this fashion for such long distances is unusual in tunnel construction. Van Weele points out an example: concrete being prepared for the tunnel liner will have to be specially treated, perhaps with ice or other retardant, to prevent it from setting up in the conveyor before it reaches its destination in the nearly nine-mile long tunnel.

Other design issues are related to hydraulics, surveying, and the use of divers. Hydraulic challenges must be overcome to ensure that seawater does not enter the diffusers at the tunnel. The diffusers themselves may have to be positioned using satellite navigational systems since the nearest land points are miles Weele adds that his firm is king with harbor studies groups, environmentalists on the diffuser design and positioning. The diffusers will be capable of withstanding and protecting such ocean elements as anchor pulls of large vessels and fishermen's nets dragged along the bottom.

DIGGING BEGINS

Now will the construction of the tunnels begin? For the effluent outfall, a vertical shaft with a finished diameter of 30 feet will be sunk from the surface of Deer Island to a depth of 300 to 400 feet below the seabed through traditional drill-and-blast methods. At the foot of the shaft, an area measuring about 300 feet in length and 35 feet in diameter will be dug out as an erection and assembly chamber. Here, the contractor will assemble the tunnel boring machine (TBM) which has been designed to bore through bedrock beneath Boston Harbor.

The tunnel boring machine will be built to certain specifications at the manufacturer's plant, then disassembled and shipped to the Deer Island site. There the pieces of the machine, which weighs from 200 to 300 tons when whole, will be lowered by crane in the chamber for reassembly. Tracks will trail behind the machine for transportation through the seabed.

The TBM looks a bit like a flat-topped rocket laid on its side to accommodate the 24-foot tunnel diameter. This powerful machine uses its rotating surface, or face, for cutting rock: nickel alloy steel disks on the face roll on the face of the rock and crack and crumble the rock in front of the cutting face. The falling rock, or muck, is scooped into buckets built into a conveyor behind the cutting face. Then the muck passes along a conveyor to the rear of the TBM where it is transported to the shaft for removal.

The TBM tows almost everything needed to operate: power, cables, air, buckets, even restrooms and a control room. These machines are in constant use around the world and have replaced traditional blasting techniques wherever possible.

Each of the Boston Harbor Project tunnels will be excavated in a similar fashion using a tunnel boring machine, but differences in their sizes and endpoints will determine how the tunnels will have a concrete liner that is constructed in the tunnel as it is being excavated.

The Inter-island Tunnel

The inter-island tunnel will be handled somewhat differently. A vertical shaft 16 feet in diameter will also be sunk from Deer Island, with the TBM excavating on an upward slope 24,800 feet to Nut Island. A second shaft will be excavated on Nut Island to make the necessary connections to the southern wastewater system. Because the inter-island is a smaller diameter tunnel of about 11 feet, Williamson explains that the entire tunnel will be dug first, then lined in a separate operation once the excavation is complete. Although precast concrete will be considered, it is likely that the choice will be a concrete liner cast within the tunnel and sealed with contact grouting.

Both operations are likely to be conducted around the clock, five days a week, with weekends being used for maintenance of the equipment. Caspe explains that once crucial issues such as water infiltration and geotechnical elements have been resolved in the design, the complex logistics of tunnel construction must be overcome. "Our job will be to earmark all of the interactions that must be coordinated both topside and in the tunnel so that everything runs smoothly," says Caspe, "including all of the people and materials involved in tunnel construction, materials barging, concreting processes, muck handling, and materials transport and storage." Case emphasizes that in tunneling "the name of the game is progress. The Authority's costs are constant so we need to minimize disruptions that will slow the project.

THE EFFLUENT OUTFALL DIFFUSERS

Crucial information about the path of both tunnels has already been collected by the MWRA, but the precise site of the end of the effluent outfall tunnel is still under investigation. Approximately eight and one-half miles into Massachusetts Bay, the last one and one-quarter miles of the effluent outfall tunnel will be connected to an estimated 80 diffusers, or 26-inch diameter pipes, which will disperse the treated wastewater into the ocean for dilution.

The Authority has narrowed the diffuser location to two site options, and Williamson says that more testing, surveying, and modeling will be conducted to complete the process. Once this issue has been resolved and the site has been chosen, the Authority will prepare plans to construct the diffuser pipes. Even then, surveys will be performed to confirm that the diffusers are not disturbing any historic or archeologically important sites. A jack-up or drilling platform will be in place for several months, sinking holes through the bedrock for the 80 diffuser pipes. Once each hole is drilled, a pipe is inserted and grouted in place. Then, a diffuser cap, a sort of fluted head that will disperse the treated wastewater into the sea, is installed at the top.

When the effluent tunnel reaches its last 6,600 feet, the contractor will connect the tunnel to the base of the diffuser pipes, at last joining the more than eight miles of tunnel to its endpoints. This should occur sometime in late 1994 or early 1995.

Six hours later at the face of the tunnel boring machine, Bob Jones's shift replacement has checked in; Jones boards the train shuttle for his return elevator ride to the surface of Deer Island. There he will go the other way, to the changing area, shed ear plugs, safety equipment, and as much dirt as possible, and walk to the ferry for his ride back to Squantum Point.

Tomorrow, Jones and his crew will repeat the process, returning to carve another 25 feet toward the end of the tunnel. For now, another shift carries on the work.

THE ADOPT-A-STATUE PROGRAM

The goal of Adopt-A-Statue is to achieve funding for the restoration of thirty-nine pieces of outdoor public art and to establish a permanent maintenance endowment which would provide for the annual cleaning and maintenance of sixty-nine pieces.

To invite individuals, groups of individuals or corporations to "adopt" a piece of Boston outdoor public art by either:

- incurring the total cost of restoring and maintaining a particular piece of art or
- making a donation toward a general restoration and maintenance fund.

Gifts are tax deductible to the extent limited by law.

For further information on how to adopt a statue please contact the Environment Department at 725-3850 (Paula Mierzejewski) or Office of Arts and Humanities at 725-3245 (Mary Shannon).

Each week the City Record will publish a statue for adoption.

NEW HOMES UNDER CONSTRUCTION AT FORMER BROOKS SCHOOL

Neighborhood residents joined the Quincy-Geneva Housing Corporation and the Minority Development and Education Association in celebrating the start of construction on their joint venture, the Phillips Brooks School Limited Equity Housing Cooperative. The project will result in 56 new units of affordable housing in the former Phillips Brooks School and on 12 parcels of adjoining vacant land. The City of Boston's Public Facilities Department sold the land and the school building to the non-profit developers for $1.

"Just as the Rev. Brooks built a strong congregation at Trinity Church nearly a century ago," said Mayor Raymond L. Flynn at the groundbreaking, "the Quincy-Geneva Housing Corporation is building, not just houses, but a strong community that will thrive and grow over the years to come."

The planned limited equity cooperative housing includes 29 units in the renovated school and nine newly constructed triple deckers. More than 80 percent of the homes will be affordable to low- and moderate-income families. The basement of the school will provide nearly 100 square feet of space for use by the community.

"We hope that the successful partnership that we have enjoyed with the Quincy-Geneva Housing Corporation on this project will extend to the community," said Otis Gates, Director of the Minority Development and Education Association, "and that the neighborhood will come together with the same sense of unity and caring that we have tried to bring to this project."

Funding for the $9 million project includes $1.2 million from the C linkage program and $5.5 million from the Mass. Housing and Finance Agency. Development assistance provided by the Community Builders, who also raised equity financing from the Gillette Company and Bank of New England. Additional funding was given through the State Office of Communities and Development and the City's Public Facilities Department.

"The Quincy-Geneva Housing Corporation has proven their dedication to revitalizing their community," said Lisa G. Chapnick, Director of PFD. "This historic building will stand as a reminder of our shared hopes for a stronger, safer community by providing those most in need the opportunity to own their homes."

James Williams, a member of the Project Review Committee and president of the neighborhood, said, "We let people know that we are not going to allow our community to fall to developers who don't care about the neighborhood or its future. It is great to see this beautiful old building being used for such a wonderful purpose."

Caroline Remy, President of the Board of Directors of the Quincy-Geneva Housing Corporation, announced the participation of Building Boston, the Spaulding Slye-sponsored program for introducing school children to the development and construction trades.

"Students from the Martin Luther King School will be visiting the construction site and learning about the entire development process," Ms. Remy. "We hope that this experience will encourage these young people to choose careers in these fields in their lives."

The development team for Brooks School Limited Equity Cooperative Housing includes CPF, Menach and Hicks, architects, Metric Construction Corporation contractor. Construction is well underway, and is scheduled to take approximately one year to complete.
